Canada is Foreign, Que. Visitors Told

WASHINGTON (CP) — Quebec literature to be handed out to tourists from the province's new tourism office here has neatly disposed of any possible problems with Labrador.

A map of Canada provided at the office, and included in a promotion kit for Thursday's official opening divides Canada into two sections: The Province of Quebec, with all of Labrador included, is labelled Quebec and the rest of the country, drawn on a smaller scale than Quebec, is labelled Canada.

Part of the geographical region of Labrador belongs to the province of Newfoundland, and the boundary has long been a sore point with the governments of the two provinces.

Attached to the map is a fact sheet about Quebec, which lists major cities, gross national product, airports and tourism statistics.

The fact sheet also lists Quebec's "offices abroad," and includes the entry "Canada—Toronto (to be opened March, 1, 1978)" after sites in Europe and the United States.

Quebec Tourism Minister Yves Duhaime, who confirmed that the map and fact sheet are among Quebec literature at the tourist office, dismissed the map as an artist's conception.

When asked whether the Canadian office should not be listed separately from offices abroad, he grinned and said: "If you look at it from a constitutional stand, you may be right — for a time."

However, Duhaime knocked down any suggestions that the office would engage in political lobbying or propaganda on behalf of the Quebec separatist government.

The primary task of the office, he noted, would be to drum up convention business in the U.S., in conjunction with plans to build a new convention centre in Montreal. He said that soon-to-be-relaxed U.S. laws restricting U.S. conventions in Canada caused the cancellations of at least 30 conventions in Montreal in 1977.

Duhaime also told reporters that Quebec is seeking to wipe out an annual $200 million tourism deficit with the United States.

Deficit $6.2B

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government incurred a spending deficit of nearly $6.2 billion in the first nine months of the 1977-78 fiscal year, the finance department reported Thursday.

Government spending for the nine months ending Dec. 31 totalled $29.7 billion, with revenue at $23.5 billion.

The deficit for the period is almost equal to last year's total deficit of $6.3 billion.

ROONEY IN A RUCKUS

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP David Rooney, already facing a charge of political corruption, was charged jointly with his wife Ruth Thursday with common assault and damage to property.

The charges arose from a fracas at the couple's downtown apartment Wednesday evening involving a freelance photographer and a newspaper reporter.

THREE-YEAR CONTRACT

Tentative Pact In Tel Strike

Negotiators for the B.C. Telephone Co. and the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union have reached tentative agreement on a three-year contract to end a 10-week strike, company spokesman Keith Mathews said today.

He said the contract is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977, and expires Dec. 31, 1979. Details were not released.

Negotiators began discussions today on a return-to-work agreement, Mathews said, adding that the contract agreement was reached late Thursday.

Indications are that when a return-to-work agreement is reached, the matter will be put to the union membership for ratification.

If the membership agrees to the new contract, workers will be phased in to their jobs. The whole process, barring a break-down in talks, could take another week.

A news blackout had been imposed after a week of intensive negotiations began in Vancouver with federal mediator Mike Collins.

The company and the union had been discussing a report by Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court, who was appointed industrial inquiry commissioner in the dispute.

Justice Hutcheon's 22-page report recommended adoption of the company's proposal for an eight-member union-management committee, presided over by an independent chairman, to handle the contracting-out matters that have been the crux of the dispute.

It also recommended the striking employees get wage increases of 45 cents an hour and 32 cents an hour during a two-year contract. Base rates ranged from $6.42 an hour to $9.75 an hour under the previous contract which expired Dec. 31, 1976.

NEWS BRIEFS

No Exception

VANCOUVER - Regulations will not be relaxed to allow Robbie Sherrell, a U.S. citizen, to take over as president of ICBC, federal Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said Thursday. See story on Page 7.

Spy Fear Cited

MONTREAL (CP) — The former head of the RCMP's security service says at least six countries had spies operating in the Montreal area in the early 1970s and at least two of the countries were directing their espionage at the Quebec separatist movement. See story on page 12.

Strikers Stay Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Maintenance workers were still off the job today at Ottawa's main postal station in the second day of a rotating strike.The 40 workers are members of the General Labor and Trades Group (GLT) of the Public Service Alliance of Canada and are responsible for maintaining the postal-sorting equipment.

2 Hostage-Takers Surrender At Pen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Hostage-takers Ralph Saumer, Dave Bennett and two unidentified hostages walked out the front door of the fortress-like British Columbia penitentiary late Thursday as the crisis, now in its seventh day, drew closer to a climax.

Saumer and Bennett, the first of five hostage-takers to give themselves up, were taken to RCMP cells in the Vancouver area, RCMP Inspector Les Holmes said.

The two hostages, who police said were in good condition after 133 hours in confinement, were debriefed on the penitentiary grounds. Police said they dictated which hostages would be freed.

RCMP have said there was collusion between some of the hostages and the five prisoners in the escape bid. A rented car was found outside the prison, located on the banks of the Fraser River east of Vancouver, containing clothing, food, drugs and .38-calibre ammunition.

Police have not said which hostages would be named in any conspiracy charges arising out of the incident.

Robert Desjarlais, Dennis Lavallee, Hanna Bauer, Mary Wildgrube, Betsy Wood, Sandra Meadley and Gay Hoon were held by the prisoners before the latest development. Thirteen persons were originally seized.

Police have said the prisoners have a handgun. No weapons were given up during the surrender.

The two hostages released brought to four the number freed Thursday. Five remain prisoners of convicted contract killer Andrew Bruce, 28, Steven Albert Hall, 28, serving 15 years for attempted murder and Richard Wright, an armed robber, in the prison's visiting area.

Meanwhile, a hostage-taking incident at the federal penitentiary service in Dorchester, N.B., ended just before dawn today with the safe release of guard Hugh Maloney and surrender of two convicts holding him since last Saturday night.

ERROR IN TYPING WINS DISCHARGE

VERNON (CP) — An RCMP typist's spelling error has won Reginald Edwards dismissal of a charge of driving with a blood alcohol reading of over .08.

Judge Jurgen Behncke dismissed the charge because the breath analysis certificate prepared by a police typist said the Vernon truck driver had been tested with "pitassium dichromate."

Judge Behncke agreed with Edwards' counsel, Robert Gillespie, that "the difference of one letter in the name of a chemical can be enormously significant."

Gillspie said the spelling error suggested the wrong chemical could have been used in the breath test. Crown prosecutor Bob Williams said the verdict may be appealed.

Strike Vote Regulation 'Turning Clock Back'

New provincial regulations governing the conduct of strike and lockout votes will turn the clock back 20 years, a B.C. Federation of Labor spokesman said today.

Secretary-treasurer Len Guy said he cannot see any necessity for the new regulations announced Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

"Secret votes already are used to get a true indication of a membership's feeling; otherwise the union membership would be in trouble," he said.

The result of the regulations will be the creation of another government bureaucracy at the taxpayers' expense, Guy added.

John Schibli, second vice-president of the Victoria Labor Council, said he objects to the new regulations because they imply monkeying around with the vote.

"We are completely above board when it comes to conducting votes of any kind."

Williams said the Labor Relations Board will be responsible for the regulations, which take effect March 1.

He said all employees in a bargaining unit will be eligible to participate in the strike vote, whether or not they are members of the union.

He said all strike and lockout votes must be secret under the Labor Code, as amended in 1976.

"There have never been any regulations or any standards set out as to how that vote should be conducted," said Williams. "That step has been taken today."

He said the regulations require unions and affiliated employers to give the board prior notice of proposals to seek strike or lockout authority and to appoint returning officers and scrutineers.

"The board must then appoint persons to supervise the votes," he said.

Acadians Claim Bombing

MONCTON (CP) — RCMP in rural St. Quentin, N.B. said today they have "four or five suspects" but had made no arrests in the firebombing early Thursday of a Canada Manpower centre there.

Constable Marcel LeBlanc said the investigation was moving "slow but sure" and "we don't know a lot more."

A letter was found in a Moncton telephone booth late Thursday, after anonymous telephone calls to the French-language daily L'Evangeline and Radio-Canada, in which a group calling itself the "Beaubassin cell" said the "Restigouche cell" was responsible for the bombing.

The note, hand-written in block letters, did not indicate what group if any might encompass the "cells."

Observers were attempting to unravel whether the incident was an isolated one or, as the note indicated, part of a radical campaign on behalf of Acadian interests.

Donatien Gaudet, president of the New Brunswick Society of Acadians, said today in an interview there is no link between his organization and any Acadian groups claiming a link with the fire bombing.

Gaudet, asked whether he believed any Acadian group was behind the incident, said:

"Your interpretation is as good as mine. Anyone can pretend (to represent someone). Anyone can sign a letter."

PRAYER'S ANSWER OVERFLOWETH

BRISBANE (AP) — Premier Joh Bjelke-Petersen, a lay preacher who led prayers for rain to break the state's worst drought last month, turned down a request today to pray again to make it stop raining.

"Everybody should be thankful that God has broken the drought throughout north Queensland," the head of the state government said.

"It is phenomenal that the rain has caused such benefits to the entire state when the situation was so desperate just a few weeks ago."

Mayor Rex Pilbeam of Rockhampton made the request and said his city "has seen enough rain to last for months."

"I've been praying for the rain to stop, but it looks as though the premier has a direct line."

The northwest monsoon started Sunday, bringing record rainfalls all over Queensland. Rivers overflowed and people have been rescued from flooded areas.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau used the opening of the British Columbia Winter Games Friday to tell Canadians they will have to lower living expectations to adjust to tougher economic conditions.

"There's no free lunch," he said.

At opening ceremonies in a packed hotel ballroom here, he told a receptive audience that Canadians need more "faith, confidence and belief in themselves."

That would aid both the nation's economic strength and national unity, he said.

Defending his government's economic policies, he said Ottawa cannot stop oil-producing nations from raising oil prices nor can Canada influence rising prices for imported food.

There are hard choices to be made, and federal and provincial finance ministers will start that process at an economic summit in Ottawa Feb. 13-15.

If governments want to continue advancing social legislation and protecting the environment someone has to pay, Trudeau said.

Competition is going to get much tougher because of developing third world countries and continuing energy price increases.

It's adjusting to these problems that now is causing Canadians so much difficulty, Trudeau said.

But even though conditions are difficult, this could also be seen as a time of great opportunity, the prime minister added.

"We're going through a crisis . . . we're not seeing the bottom fall out of our economy," he said.

Envoy Expelled

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States today ordered the expulsion of Vietnam's ambassador to the United Nations, Dinh Ba Thi, named earlier this week in an espionage case, the state department announced.

AVALANCHES

GENEVA (Reuter) — At least 10 persons were killed when strong winds sent scores of avalanches cascading down the French, Italian and Swiss Alps during the night and early today.

Many intenational passenger trains had to be diverted in both Italy and Switzerland because avalanches covered the tracks.

New $150M Gas Lines Approved

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The National Energy Board Thursday approved construction of two northeastern B.C. natural gas pipelines at a combined cost of nearly $150 million.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said work will start immediately on both the 101-mile, $122 million Grizzly Valley and the 96-mile, $28.5 million Silver Dahl pipeline projects that will help bring out the estimated 2.5 to 3 trillion cubic feet of gas in the area.

In addition to the two pipelines, construction will start this month on a $75 million gas processing plant at High Hasler in the Chetwynd area.

The plant will not be ready for operation until September, 1979, but both pipelines will be completed this year — Silver Dahl in April and Grizzly Valley by early fall.

The projects had been approved by the provincial cabinet in December, 1976, and have been waiting federal government approval for the past 14 months.

Last year the government ordered a judicial inquiry into the Grizzly Valley pipeline following accusations by the NDP that windfall profits had been made in stock transactions involving Quasar Petroleum Ltd. and Cheyenne Petroleum Ltd. because of inside information.

Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith found that there had been no breach of the law but that four people were in a position where there was a rule against their purchasing shares in the companies involved.

Arthur Weeks, Phillips' special adviser, was fired as soon as the minister was informed he had purchased 3,000 shares of Cheyenne Petroleum.

Arthur Cameron, Phillips' constituency secretary, resigned after being asked to do so when it was learned he had purchased 1,000 shares in each of Quasar and Cheyenne.

Two geologists with the provincial government were also dismissed when it was learned they had purchased shares in the two firms.

At peak construction, it is expected 450 men will work on the Grizzly Valley line, 410 on the Silver Dahl and 300 on

Blais Silence 'Travesty'

OTTAWA (CP) — Only two days after he took office the new solicitor-general, J. J. Blais, was in hot water in the Commons today with the Opposition charging he was making a travesty of the job of MPs by refusing to answer questions.

The new minister flatly refused to answer questions arising out of inquiries by Quebec and the federal government into illicit activities of the RCMP.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) and others said they interpreted remarks by the minister as saying he would answer no questions concerning his department before he took over from Francis Fox Wednesday.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said if Blais's refusal is accepted "the House of Commons might as well close down."

He said he has not heard such an outrageous statement for many years.

Veteran Stanley Knowles, New Democrat House leader, said it was an affront to Parliament.

Under rulings already given by Speaker James Jerome former ministers — such as Jean-Pierre Goyer and Warren Allmand — cannot answer questions in the Commons concerning police activities during their tenure in the portfolio.

Clark said the Opposition has been put in the position of getting no information concerning the activities of the national police.

He said it is a most dangerous proposal to maintain the right to stay silent in the face of questions.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham), a former Ontario solicitor-general, said Blais's statement "reduces proceedings of this House to a travesty, to a state of impotence, on an important political matter."

Nurses to Arbitration

The 12,500-member Registered Nurses Association has opted for binding arbitration to settle a contract dispute with more than 100 B.C. hospitals.

The association applied Wednesday to Labor Minister Allan Williams for an arbitration panel under the terms of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

The nurses' bargaining group is the second in the past month to choose arbitration under the essential services statute.

The 21,000 member-Hospital Employees Union was the first union to choose arbitration since the legislation was passed last October.

RNABC spokesman Jerry Miller said the nurses' move follows more than three months of fruitless negotiations with the Health Labor Relations Association, bargaining agency for 107 hospitals.

If the parties cannot agree on the make-up of the arbitration board within 10 days Williams is required to appoint one.

The nurses' association began negotiations with HLRA in October and mediator Clark Gilmour has been involved since November. The existing contract expired Dec. 31, 1977.

Miller said HLRA has yet to make a salary offer.

322,546 BLOOMS ON SECOND DAY

Victoria's annual flower count stood at 322,546 this morning in the second day of tabulating outdoor blossoms and blooms.

With four days to go, Victoria Chamber of Commerce officials were confident the total would go well above last year's count of 470,600.

The count began Wednesday morning when an executive reported three yellow pansies growing in his back yard and the total quickly ran to 7,000.

But it was a single call from the nursury of Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight that gave the count a boost. The nursury reported 293,825 flowers growing outdoors.

More than 120 Victorians have called to report their totals. Flower count phone numbers are 388-7501, 386-2441 or 384-9314. The lines are open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Residents are to report only the flowers growing outdoors in their own yards. Special teams will be counting flowers in Beacon Hill park, Government House, University of Victoria and Butcharts Gardens.

Approval Given B.C. For $150M Gaslines

the processing plant, but there will be some overlapping of employees, Phillips said.

He said construction crews are already heading into the areas concerned.

"Time is of the essence. If it had been delayed another week they'd have lost all the winter construction."

Both lines will be built by Westcoast Transmission. The Grizzly Valley line will connect the gas fields 75 miles southwest of Dawson Creek and south of Chetwynd to the new processing plant and then to the main Westcoast feeder line to the coast.

The Silver Dahl line will run from Fort St. John to the Silver Dahl gas fields 96 miles to the northeast.

Asked if the increased reserves and productivity will influence the current B.C. Energy Commission's study on the feasibility of supplying natural gas to Vancouver Island, Energy Minister Jack Davis said everything on the supply side helps.

"The reason the pipeline to Vancouver Island wasn't built a few years back was that the supply situation suddenly was questioned after the failure of a couple of fields up north. Now it's no longer in question."

He said the Grizzly Valley gas fields prove every British Columbian can be looked after as far as gas is concerned.

With the new gas finds and increased exploration, B.C. has a guaranteed gas supply for at least the next 30 years, he said.

Premier Bill Bennett first released the news of the federal go-ahead for the projects during a luncheon with the Greater Victoria and Sidney chambers of commerce at the Royal Oak Inn.

He said construction will give a boost to B.C.'s employment during a traditional low point in the economy.

It will also mean construction people will be ready and able to work for the Alcan pipeline project when it finally gets underway.

Meanwhile, in the Commons, the federal government's long awaited legislation governing construction of a northern pipeline to carry ntural gas to southern markets was introduced today.

The Commons immediately passed a motion setting up a special 14-member committee of MPs to consider the legislation.

The Northern Pipeline Agency is to be created to oversee construction of the pipeline that is tentatively scheduled to begin operation in 1983.

The legislation provides for the establishment of a federal-provincial consultative council representing the three provinces most affected by the pipeline—British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Construction is not expected to begin until the winter of 1980-81 in northern B.C. and the Yukon territory.

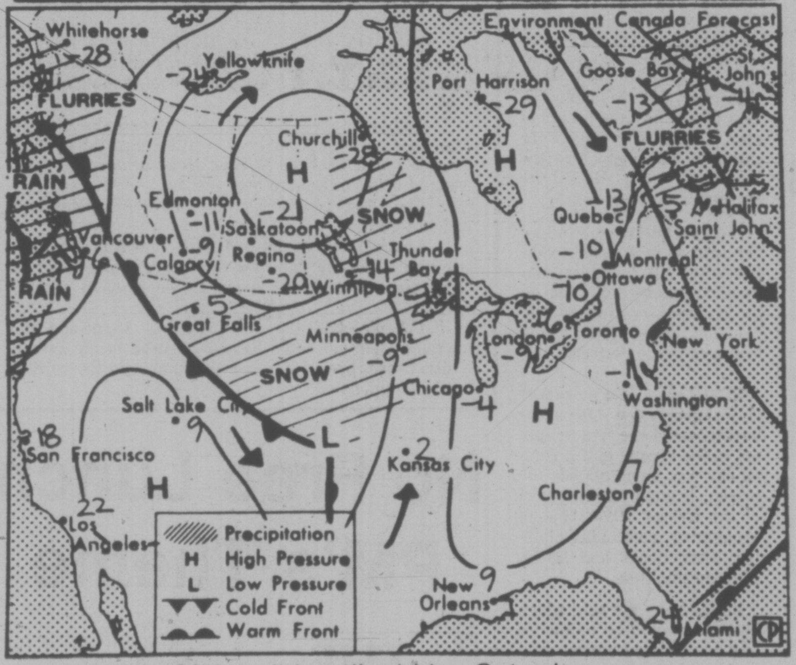

Map valid until midday Saturday.

The arctic air has retreated to near the coast mountains. Thus snow changed to rain as the milder air returned to the south coast of B.C. The disturbance which brought the rain to the southern coast also produced snow across the Interior.

It continued across B.C. into Alberta this morning. Behind skies remain cloudy with few sunny breaks.

Another Pacific storm offshore is expected to reach the south coast Saturday bringing more rain to coastal areas with some snow spreading into the Interior.

Beirnes Blamed For Mess

Delays in issuing certificates for the provincial governmnt's hospitality program were due in part to the mess and disorganization left behind by temporary program director Helen Beirnes.

The charge was made today by Deputy Travel Minister Wayne Currie.

He was responding to Beirnes' claim that the travel ministry used the program for publicity purposes and showed no interest in getting the certificates distributed.

Beirnes was hired for three months to set up a hospitality course for the provincial government. Her term expired Oct. 15 and her contract was not renewed.

Beirnes said Victoria hotel and restaurant people are upset because they had high hopes for the course and though about 200people took it, no certificates have been distributed.

She said the course appears to have been little more than a political gambit.

"This is certainly not a personal vendetta or a feud with the minister (Grace McCarthy) who has done some good things but there has been no follow through on the hospitality program and many Victoria merchants want to know why," she said.

Currie said the ministry had some difficulties picking up the pieces after Beirnes departed in mid-October and, in addition, little was done over the Christmas holiday.

Since then all certificates have been distributed to local municipalities and they will be awarded soon, in many cases by the chamber of commerce.

Free Heroin Not Answer: Winterton

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British approach to narcotic addiction is not the total answer to drug problems in British Columbia, Vancouver police chief Don Winterton said Thursday.

"In Britain, when the government has faced a problem with respect to narcotic abuse, they have traditionally turned to doctors for the answer, Winterton said. "Unlike North America, their approach has been from a medical perspective, ours from a law-enforcement approach."

Winterton said in the United Kingdom an addict is defined as someone who has been determined by a doctor to be dependent upon a controlled drug and who is taking the drug regularly.

"We have no such definition in this country," he said.

Winterton said that from the 1920's through the 1950's Britain had a heroin addict population of about 500.

They were, he said, respectable middle-aged people who had become addicted as a side effect of medical treatment, or who were actually doctors or other professionals with easy access to drugs.

"By the mid-1960's it became obvious that the heroin adwing rapidly and the new addict was found to be an adolescent whose addiction did not stem from treatment.

"This new type of addict was the kind that we in North America know best," he said.

Winterton said he discovered data on one doctor known to prescribe a total of 14 pounds of heroin for treatment purposes in one year.

Another doctor, he said, was known to issue two prescriptions to the same addict in consecutive months. One was for 1,000 tablets of heroin and the other for 800 tablets of heroin.

"Clearly the free heroin drug program was not working to the betterment of society," he said.

Winterton said in Britain there now are about 2,000 heroin addicts in treatment. Of this group, less than five per cent are now on heroin maintenance; the majority of those in treatment are presently on oral methadone maintenance.

He said there is no firm data available from the 43 separate police forces in Britain as to the total number of heroin addicts, except the estimate of between 8,000 and 10,000.

There are 10,000 known heroin addicts in B.C., but few take advantage of the methadone program available here, he said.

Winterton said he believed if B.C. tackled its drug addiction problem with law enforcement and medical offices co-operating, "it may be a start in lowering the number of addicts we now have and hopefully lowering the rate of crime which is related to drug abuse.

"It's not going to solve everything overnight, but anything is better than what we have now."

British Columbia intends to introduce legislation this spring which would make treatment for addicts compulsory.

Winterton promised that when free compulsory drug addiction treatment comes into effect, it will not lower law enforcement to get addicts off the street.

Steel Levy Backed

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. said Thursday that British Columbia should not be exempt from import duties designed to prevent the dumping of wide-flange steel beams in Canada.

Algoma, the only Canadian producer of the beams, said in a prepared statement that the practice of dumping, selling the beams here for less than it cost to produce them abroad, affects the entire Canadian steel industry.

"Algoma believes that the trade laws are intended to be and must be national in scope and that regional exemptions such as the one requested by the B.C. representations are inconsistent with this principle," the company said.

Allan MacEachen, deputy prime minister, told the Commons on Wednesday that the federal cabinet is reviewing a 30-per-cent import duty on the foreign beams with a sense of urgency.

Algoma said B.C. fabricators and contractors should not be protected by the availability of goods imported into Canada on the basis of unfair trade practices in contravention of Canadian and international laws.

Algoma said efforts are being made to reduce the high costs of transporting steel beams to B.C. and added that the company has a marketing strategy that gives it effective national coverage including the market in B.C.

Broadbent Roasts Blue Collar Pitch

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite sharp Commons criticism Thursday, Employment Minister Bud Cullen stuck by advice to parents to encourage children to train for blue collar work instead of studying to become professionals.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party Leader, took exception to this statement Cullen made in Moncton, N.B., Wednesday:

"We've got to stop momma and poppa saying every kid has got to be a doctor or an engineer or a lawyer. We've got to have them look at some of the trades, the blue collar trades."

Cullen made a similar statement in the Commons this time but rejected Broadbent's charge this was an admission of a colossal failure by the government which has spent $2 billion on training projects in the past seven years.

Canadians have either been getting the wrong kind of training or the right kind of training but no jobs are available to them, Broadbent said. In either case, it was the government's fault.

Even though unemployment in the blue collar sector is high, Cullen was advising "young Canadians that they should not aspire to go to university but be content with the blue dollar jobs."

Despite government money spent on training, corporations are relying on immigrants to fill blue collar jobs when they should be training Canadians for the jobs, Cullen said.

Cullen later said in an interview maybe corporations should only be permitted to hire skilled immigrants on condition they train Canadians for the future.

"The corporations have a moral and social obligation to help us out of the dilemma," Cullen said.

New Batteries For Locators

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department has developed new batteries to power electronic devices that signal the location of downed private aircraft, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Thursday.

Lang said the new batteries should be available soon but that installation of the battery in aircraft will not be compulsory.

Lang was replying in the Commons to Jack Ellis (PC—Hastings) who asked what progress was being made on development of a safe lithium battery for the devices, called electronic locator transmitters (ELT).

The transport department had made ELTs mandatory on all aircraft until the batteries started to corrode. Two ELTs actually exploded and the department rescinded its regulation during the search for a safer battery.

Some MPs wanted the suspension lifted.

Messy Assessments

It was only to be expected when the entire province changed over to a new property tax assessment system for 1978 that major inequities, hitherto unseen, would come to light during the implementation period.

The first of these, at least in the Victoria area, now seems to have been unearthed by city council, in particular by finance committee chairman Murray Glazier. In a brief presented to the provincial cabinet Thursday, Glazier outlined clearly the problem that has arisen in fairly assessing single-family homes, duplexes, condominiums and apartments under the new system.

Like everything else about the assessment system, it's complicated to explain, but basically it seems to be rooted in the differing assessment method used to assess apartments as compared to other types of residential housing.

When the provincial government set up the new system, it decreed that all residential property — rental or self-owned — would be assessed at 15 per cent of its actual value for taxation purposes. (Commercial property is to be assessed at 25 per cent of its actual value, industrial property at 30 per cent.) That seems fair enough.

But the problems creep in when the assessor has to decide on the actual value of each piece of property. For all self-owned housing — single-family housing, duplexes and condominiums — actual value normally means market value. The question asked by an assessor looking at a condominium is: What have similar suites in this same block (or in a similar neighboring block) been selling for recently?

But the assessors have been using a different method in assessing apartment blocks. Instead of asking what a retired farmer from Saskatchewan would pay for a suite in a block, they have been asking what an investor would pay for it as rental housing stock?

The investor, of course, looks on it as a commercial enterprise and considers such matters as return on investment and management costs when figuring out its value; therefore, the actual value determined through this system is considerably lower than it would be for a similar block of condominiums .

What is really happening is that the apartment building owner is getting the benefit of commercial costs when the actual value is assessed, but doesn't have to pay the offsetting higher commercial tax rates.

The result is that assessments (and hence property taxes) for apartments are declining significantly with the shortfall having to be made up by the ordinary owner of a single-family home or condominium. Figures produced by Glazier show that by 1980, if the formula is not changed, the assessments for apartments will have decreased by 23 per cent, while those of condominiums will have increased by 20 per cent and those of single-family houses and duplexes will have gone up by a whopping 33 per cent.

This is obviously inequitable and will result on the ordinary homeowner paying a far higher share of the tax burden than he has done in the past.

Glazier's statistics show that by 1980, under the new formula, single-family and duplex owners will be paying 14 per cent more of the total tax burden and condominium owner 1.7 per cent more, while apartment owners will be paying 30.7 per cent less.

The provincial government should amend the new assessment formula either to insist that apartments be assessed at 25 per cent as commercial property, or to insist that the actual value of apartments be determined by the same method as that of other residential property is.

It is to be expected that inequities will turn up, but it is also to be expected that, when they are found, the government will take immediate steps to rectify them.

The Vicar of Etc. Etc.

A correspondent of The Times of London noted in a recent letter:

"I see from The Times of January 14 that the appointment has been announced of the new Vicar of Upton Snodsbury with Broughton Hackett and Naunton Beauchamp and Grafton Flyford with North Piddle and Flyford Flavell. Is this, Sir, a record?"

No, but his calling cards must weigh more than the Archbishop of Canterbury's crozier.

W.A. WILSON

Why'd We Stay So Cool?

OTTAWA — The cool restraint with which the Canadian government reacted to the fall into Canadian territory of a nuclear-equipped Soviet satellite seems to have been widely accepted as appropriate by the people of this country.

Outside the country it seems to have produced two differing reactions: Surprise on one hand and appreciation on the other. The government itself has not publicly explained the reasons behind the posture it decided upon at the beginning of the affair.

Officials explain, however, that it was felt at once that everything the government said or did would set a precedent because this is the first, but probably not the last, incident of its kind. The treaties that bear on such accidents are so far no more than the bare bones of new international law which requires development and expansion in this new field.

"This sort of thing is going to happen again and the question is what should be done, what guidelines and procedures should be adopted," one official said. "We think, taking the long view, that it was cautious and wise to avoid burning any bridges.

No Bridge-burning

"We want to have a voice in an expanded international regime governing such incidents but the two super powers will have the final say. If we had offended either of them or appeared one-sided, we could have jeopardized future international co-operation. We wanted to keep open the possibility of specific recommendations being listened to."

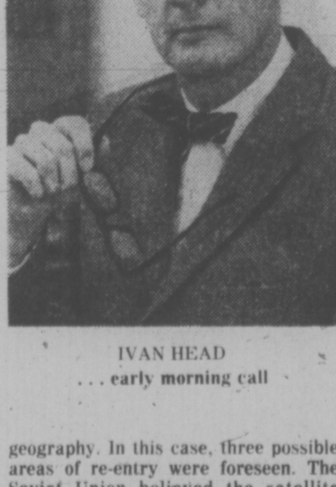
The Canadian view is that the superpowers are not irresponsible in launching this particular sort of satellite but are taking chances that affect all countries. Surveillance satellites are put into a relatively low orbit, just at the outer edge of the earth's atmosphere which tends to pull them down. As this happen, their motors are fired to boost them back up and eventually into true space where they will remain permanently in orbit.

If their propulsion system fails, the satellite continues on a descending orbit until it plunges back into the atmosphere and at least partially burns but, as in the Canadian case, with the possibility of radioactive debris reaching the ground. The most obvious improvement would be international agreement on a better fail-safe capability built into the satellites, something that no country can force onto either the United States or the Soviet Union. A co-operative and restrained reaction to the first such incident appears here more likely to produce future results than sharpness or anger.

This has not prevented the government from quietly informing the Soviet Union that it has reservations over the relative slowness with which requested technical information was provided.

The government believes that a requirement for forewarning is a desirable part of whatever international regime is developed but it is not critical of the fact that on this occasion the Soviet Union did not communicate with Canada while the satellite was in its downward orbit. In part, this is because it was receiving all possible information from the United States and in part because it is appreciated that the Soviet authorities themselves had some difficulties.

The USSR does not have, for obvious geopolitical reasons, as extensive a space tracking system as the United States, which is able to maintain a worldwide network. The Soviets lose track of their satellites when they are behind the earth in relation to USSR geography. In this case, three possible areas of re-entry were foreseen. The Soviet Union believed the satellite would re-enter the atmosphere more or less above the Aleutian Islands and, if anything reached earth, that its remains would fall into the Bering Sea, not reaching Canadian territory. The United States, more accurately, thought it might re-enter either above the North West Territories or alternatively, the south Atlantic — a considerable spread.



IVAN HEAD
. . . early morning call

Some thought was given to asking the Soviet Union to assist in the recovery of any debris. Three factors were considered. The first was that if there was any human risk they might as well accept their share of it. The second was that if they were invited in, this might create a reciprocal advantage for the United States if at some later date a U.S. satellite tumbled onto Soviet territory. The final, and conclusive, consideration was that there is still such a high level of east-west suspicion that even if Canada asked the Soviets in, they would probably not agree if later on the Americans wanted to help recover one of their satellites from Russian territory.

There was an initial political effort to engender some heat over the fact that Canada's information came entirely from the United States. It was inevitable that this be the case since this country does not possess space-tracking facilities whereas the United Statss has extremely sophisticated ones. These are not part of the NORAD establishment, although their centre is beside NORAD at Colorado Springs. They are maintained by NASA and the U.S. Air Force space command. NORAD's high-powered radars perform an entirely different function. NASA moreover, maintains the only known catalogue of objects in space.

Trudeau Phoned Head

Thus, all the initial information was American and the only other source possible was the Soviet Union. One is an ally, the other is not. In the final moments of the satellite's descent there were actually three virtually simultaneous flows of information. President Carter telephoned Prime Minister Trudeau. His security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, telephoned Ivan Head, the prime minister's foreign affairs specialist, giving him the actual map coordinates of the re-entry point and extending detailed offers of assistance. NORAD telephoned the chief of the defence staff, Admiral Falls.

A second round of telephone calls followed immediately, between men still at their homes. Trudeau telephoned Head with instructions, and the chief of staff phoned him immediately afterwards. Head then phoned Defence Minister Danson's executive assistant, Maj.-Gen. Gus Cloutier. During these calls, Head was authorized to respond to Brzezinski, and by 8 a.m. was able to inform him that Canada would co-ordinate the operation through the military, that American assistance would be welcome and that detailed information would be radioed to U.S. aircraft while they were in flight to Canada.

There was a 40-minute pause while they key figures left their homes for their offices. Then the Soviet ambassador was telephoned from the prime minister's office and told what had occurred. Defence experts assembled at Trudeau's office to work out the details of the necessary operations.

There had been some days of previous communication between Canada and the UN but it is of some interest that the first word of alert received by the government of Canada "came through normal intelligence channels."

Seal Hunt

In reference to your apology for the seal hunt of Jan. 23, I should like to offer the following observations:

The opposition to the Newfoundland seal hunt is not confined to the American public. As a Canadian with a reverence for all life, I also see the seal hunt as a brutal, senseless exercise.

I agree with the propaganda put out by the fisheries department that sealing cannot be considered in isolation from the social and economic milieu in which it is pursued. I also agree that apartheid in South Africa cannot be considered in isolation from the social and economic milieu in which it is pursued. That doesn't mean that I have to approve of sealing or of apartheid. I don't.

I am sure, like the Newfoundlanders of North America, that the Boers are a rugged, kind and simple folk, among the most humane of people on the continent of Africa. I am equally sure that they would dismiss my opposition to apartheid as a feeling that does not respond well to hard facts.

I appreciate the fact that the hunting of seal pups in Newfoundland, like the subjugation of the black race in South Africa, is a way of life that has gone on for many generations. But there is a question of morality here that transcends any social or economic considerations!

And I just can't buy the unsubstantiated claims put out by the apologists for the hunt that leaving the harp seal in peace would represent a serious threat to the fishing industry. Baloney! — James A. Wickert, 1258 Balmoral Road.

It Isn't the Poor

I trust that those who are continously voicing their strong opinons about the cheats and rip-offs practiced by the underprivileged on the UIC and welfare have read the very fine article by Richard Gywn, UIC: Welfare for the Wealthy (Times, Jan. 26). The writer is by no means left-wing in his opinions.

It is indeed astonishing to read that in 1975 the top 20 per cent of Canadian families with average incomes of $30,000 received 22.3 per cent of all unemployment benfits whereas the bottom 20 per cent of families with average incomes of $2,700 received just 8.1 per cent of the benefits.

He ends by saying that we should stop pretending that governments exist to help the needy as opposed to the politically powerful like the middle and upper-income class.

I trust that this very fine article will silence those who seem to delight in picking on the less fortunate sectors of our society. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

India's Defence

In the writeup in the Times (Jan. 20) on Canadian firms operating in South Africa, the comparing of the racist policies of South Africa to those of India, etc. is sheer absurdity and stupidity. It reflects a height of ignorance, arrogance and perhaps the very racist nature of the writer itself. We have never ever heard of any racist policies of the Indian government. What is surprising is that the reputable paper like yours would publish such ridiculous and baseless statements! — Ms. Hansi Bish, 404-360 Douglas Street.

Crystal Gardens

Sam Bawlf is to be sincerely thanked for his decision to save and renovate the old Crystal Gardens. The first priority, assuring that the building has a future, is now an accomplished fact. The new priority, surely one of equal importance, is the quality and style of the renovation.

Victoria has seen increasing number of renovations-cum-restorations as the heritage bandwagon gathered momentum — some good, some not so good, and a few downright awful. This may be partly the fault of preservationists who are happy enough that a building is preserved and refrain from any criticism of subsequent renovations. Whether this is a result of not wanting to upset the owner with further demands, the lack of communication between owner and renovator, or plain ignorance of the appropriate style and techniques of renovation, or a combination of them all, the building usually suffers architecturally or structurally. I am thinking specifically of all the sandblasted exterior brick walls in the city that have neither been repointed or sealed after being stripped of protective surfaces.

Because the Crystal Gardens is in a league by itself the problems of repairing without further damaging it must be legion. Hopefully experts from across the country are being consulted.

As regards exterior and interior designs, they should be of the finest quality. The integrity of the exterior must not be compromised with additional structures, in fact, the exterior should be restored to the architects' original renderings, with its wrought iron pinnacles and light fixtures. The current craze for sandblasted brick interiors should be ignored in favor of much tilework and ornamental iron. Fountains should be made of stone or cement. The end result should be superior in attention to detail and evocation of the past than the original.

It's a tall order, and to my knowledge only two buildings in B.C. are of a comparable quality — the Orpheum in Vancouver, and Victoria's Parliament Buildings. With these as standards, and with the growing number of Crystal Gardens aficionados, it would be tragic, if a few years hence public taste found the concepts shoddy and dated, the paint peeling, and wondered why on earth the Gardens didn't deserve better. — Tom Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Problem at Top

Re: Dr. Cunningham's ideas on bureaucracies in Editor's Notebook of Jan. 28:

His ideas are nothing new and seem to be conceived in the ivory tower of our university. They may apply to a limited number of special conditions, but not to the average clerk-staffed government office with administrative responsibilities.

Judging from many years of public service experience in clerical as well as professional positions, at municipal and provincial levels of government across the country, I find the following:

The average government office is run by its workers with rare reference to its "boss". This good man might become very embarrassed if any questions were put to him, as he is increasingly ignorant of and disinterested in the job he holds for lifetime. Workers of today are largely overqualified because of today's job market and often overstep their duties. Precisely the fact that these low-motivation, routine jobs are so boring encourages them to use their idle capacities. We no longer have Grade Six clerks with a low IQ in these jobs, as Mr. Cunningham thinks! You will only find them in the local paper mills.

As to the bosses' responsibilities, however, these are more and more fictitious. Contrary to public belief, overstaffing with resulting multiplication of "services", i.e. cancerous bureaucratic growth, is predominant in the circles of our untouchables — deputies, directors, assistants and their offices. In this deadwood jungle of personal intrigues, responsibility becomes anonymous. It is beyond control and reflects down to the little boss in his corner office. If reform is due, it is at the top, not at the bottom! — G.G., Victoria.

MP on E & N

My appearance before the Canadian Transport Commission in Victoria on March 8, 1976, was directed towards the maintenance of the passenger service on the E & N Railway. I was disappointed, therefore, to learn that the CTC had ordered the CPR to cease that service.

There is considerable opposition to this order. Provincial authorities, individuals and community groups have indicated their disagreement with it and have urged reconsideration.

The arguments I advanced are still, to my mind, valid. They were put forward by others as well. I am as convinced today as I was then that it is a grave mistake to have ordered that service closed.

If, however, there is no backtracking by the commission, the least the commission can do is to order the CPR to return to the Crown (at today's evaluations) the lands granted to the company (or its predecessor) as inducement to open up and maintain the service. There is no denying that those lands have produced many jobs for British Columbians; the fact remains that the CPR is now being ordered to relinquish its obligation without being asked to redeem the privileges granted to it (or acquired) along with that obligation.

In addition, I should like to know whether any thought was given to requiring the CPR to produce time and rate schedules more attuned to the needs of the communities through which the railway passes. This alteration alone might have turned the fortunes of the railway from red to black. — Donald W. Munro, MP, Esquimalt-Saanich.

RCMP and Banks

Generations of Canadians have respected and trusted our RCMP and our chartered banks. Now, federal and provincial governments are making a bold effort to undermine our confidence. Solicitor-General Francis Fox in Ottawa and Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair in Victoria will not succeed in shattering institutions that have earned, often the hard way, public confidence.

Not long ago the Victorian conducted a survey asking the newspaper's readers to list ten categories of occupations in order of trust. Doctors and bankers came on top and politicians in last place.

Now Mr. Mair, doesn't this tell you anything? — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

In Case of Need

On behalf of many homeowners who are on fixed incomes I wish to thank publicly the assessment appeal board for establishing the principle that assessments will be greatly lowered in case of need.

The exemplary drastic reduction of the assessment of the Victoria Racquet Club is very heartening and it is anticipated that it will lead to many similar rulings. — Harland W. Clark, 10994 Madrona Drive, Sidney.

Cuba in Africa: Why the Concern?

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Washington Post

LUSAKA, Zambia — The Carter administration has recently signaled a marked shift in its policy of detente toward Cuba, making a major public issue out of the growing Cuban involvement throughout Africa and particularly in internal African military conflicts.

The real reasons behind the U.S. decision to harden its stand at this time toward Cuba over its African activities still remain unclear. But here in Africa, at least, it seems the administration is now protesting much more vociferously than any African country other than perhaps Somalia and Zaire.

This raises the question of why the United States is putting itself visibly so far out ahead of most African states and whether, in so doing, it does not risk alienating as many African capitals as it may be quietly pleasing.

Cuba, after all, has its own special historical links to the African continent, and it is simply aiding governments of a similar Marxist persuasion that have asked for its help.

Elsewhere, it is acting to further, or uphold, principles enshrined in the Organization of African Unity charter: the liberation of black people from oppressive white rule in southern Africa and the preservation of national unity in the cae of Ethiopia and Angola.

Whether it is also abetting the subversion of established African governments, like those in Zaire and Malawi, as has been alleged, remains so far unsubstantiated. In any case, it is not over this issue that the Carter administration is taking Cuba to task.

While the U.S. concern about Cuba is certainly shared by the more conservative African states, it is certainly not by a good dozen or more socialist ones. Even a number of moderates, like Zambia and Nigeria, that are seriously committed to the black liberation struggle and have given up on the West as a source of military assistance, are highly appreciative of Cuban help.

Viewed from Washington, Communist Cuba is apparently merely a surrogate of the Soviet Union, furthering Moscow's finely timed expansionist designs on a continent all too ripe for, and defenceless against, foreign intervention of all sorts.

The Cubans, it would seem from the administration's protests, are even more dangerous than the Russians, presumably because they are proving far more acceptable and thus effective in spreading the gospel of Marx and Lenin, not to mention anti-U.S. propaganda.

However, to many African countries, Cuba represents something quite different. It is a Third World country of many black-skinned people offering an alternative to the heavy-handed, and often all-too-demanding, superpowers pursuing global interests of their own.

Has Its Own
Special Links
To Continent

Cuba has shown no interest in obtaining bases or port and airport facilities on the continent, because it has no strategic need for them. A small nation of limited military outreach and manpower, it poses no threat to the all-too-vulnerable sovereignty of most African countries.

Indeed, in the two embattled African nations of Angola and Ethiopia, it is providing troops, advisers and other military assistance precisely to help preserve their national unity, in addition to the government in power.

It should not be forgotten that no issue is more emotional and fear-provoking in most African capitals than that of national unity. This is precisely because nations on this continent are still such fragile entities in their present-day colonial inherited borders.

Nor should one forget that, viewed from Africa, the United States did not distinguish itself as a dedicated partisan of the principle of national unity during Nigeria's difficult struggle to prevail over the secessionist movement in Biafra from 1967 to 1970. The same is now proving true again, for different reasons and in different times, in the case of Ethiopia and even Angola.

In southern Africa, Cuba is on the side of the angels so far as black Africa is concerned. It is helping to train nationalist guerrillas to overthrow the white minority governments in Namibia and Rhodesia. Black Africa generally hails the Cuban commitment on this issue — and takes note of the unwillingness of Western nations to do as much.

The U.S. hue and cry over the Cuban role in Africa has focused heavily on the military aspect of it. But it should also be noted that Cuba has sent hundreds of civilian technicians and doctors too, principally, Mozambique, Ethiopia, Angola and Tanzania.

Indeed, Cuba, with a population of fewer than 10 million, is probably now providing more doctors, medical personnel and technicians to Africa than is the United States, with a population of more than 200 million. And this is much appreciated in such countries as Tanzania, where the leaders are clamoring for more Cuban assistance.

Even on the issue of Cuba's military assistance to Angola and Ethiopia, not many African governments are likely to join the United States publicly in pressing for the withdrawal of its troops. The main reason for this is that every African leader wants to reserve the right to call upon outside assistance of his choosing to maintain himself in dire times.

Young Cuban soldier captured in Angola civil war

Long before Cuba, both France and Britain — the main former colonial masters of this continent — sent troops upon request to bolster threatened newly independent African states, the British to Tanzania and Uganda and the French to Gabon. Cuba is thus setting no African precedent in this regard.

Another question raised by the administration's outcry over the Cuban presence in Africa is why Washington officialdom had decided to take such a different attitude toward this little Caribbean nation than toward the Soviet Union.

Many U.S. policymakers dealing with Africa at the State Department and the White House take a cool approach toward the vastly expanded Soviet engagement in Africa, arguing that Moscow has way overextended itself and is pursuing a policy destined to collapse under its own weight. Furthermore, they believe that African nationalsim will eventually assert itself against Soviet expansionism and turn it back, just as happened in Somalia and earlier in Egypt and the Sudan.

If Moscow is overextended in its African commitment, Havana, with one-quarter of its entire army now said to be here, is certainly far more so. Why then does the same logic and attitude applied to the Soviet Union not also obtain in the case of little Cuba?

Finally, it seems difficult to separate the U.S. reaction to Cuba's expanding role in Africa from the great difficulty Washington is having in learning how to get along with the radical African socialist states, whose number is no longer negligible.

It is primarily these states that are increasingly turning to Cuba for all kinds of assistance, preferring to work with a small Third World nation seeking to solve the problems of development in a similar socialist manner. For Cuba, it is extremely easy to relate to them; for the United States, it is proving exceedingly difficult.

How to Make Them Stop Having Babies

KATHLEEN NEWLAND

(This article was adapted for Worldwatch Institute from Newland's forthcoming book, 'The Sisterhood of Man: Women's Changing Roles in a Changing World')

It was a happy coincidence that the United Nations placed two international years of concern, one for population and one for women, on successive pages of its annual calendar.

The people who pay attention to events like 1974's World Population Year and 1975's International Women's Year — people inside governments, international bureaucracies, private foundations, research institutes, and the communications industry — found themselves thinking about the two subjects almost simultaneously. The juxtaposition of the U.N. years may have been responsible for the spurt of interest in the connection between women's roles and population growth. Whatever the reason, sometime during the mid-'70s population planners discovered women, and vice versa.

Any effort to understand the link between women's roles and population growth must begin by looking at the conditions that motivate women either to expand or to limit the size of their families. The present attempt starts with the assumption that women who have a lot of children usually are responding in a rational manner to a set of real incentives, positive or negative.

The balance of rewards and costs associated with childbearing may appear more favorable than that connected with any alternative use of a woman's time and energy. There may even be penalties for low fertility, ranging from disapproval to divorce or abandonment. A policy aimed at bringing down the birth rate has a much greater chance of success if its designers take into account the reasons behind a woman's personal decision about family size.

The failure of many family planning programs over the last decade or two is in part a measure of their failure to approach women as whole individuals. Programs that deal with women merely as reproductive beings can hardly bring about the broad social changes requisite to fundamental changes in attitudes toward family size.

One straw man that badly needs knocking down is the population planner who expects that, in the absence of some intrusion, women will simply go on breeding as long as they are able. The assumption that there is a child-shaped void in the heart, mind, and body of every woman creates an adversary relationship between women and population planners. The conflict is unproductive for both sides, and unnecessary as well, for though they may have different goals uppermost in their minds, the two have a great deal of common ground to cover.

Women Need
Than Motherhood

Both women and men need to have some sense of purpose and accomplishment in life. Few people have a vast array of choices about how to find that sense of fulfilment. For many, the answer is so obvious that it hardly amounts to a choice.

One takes one's place in the established order of one's immediate surroundings — whether as hired laborer, teacher, merchant, bureaucrat, landlord, housewife, farmer, or some combination of such roles. The context defines the possibilities for everyone, but it usually defines them more narrowly for women than for men.

For most women, purpose and accomplishment have been defined largely — and sometimes almost exclusively — in terms of motherhood. But what must be realized is that the centrality of women's maternal role is a social construct, not a biological trait. Family planning programs that fail to grasp that point, however well-intentioned they are, adopt an attitude toward women that is fundamentally coercive.

"What can we do to make them stop having all those babies?" is an approach that, no matter how much it relies on carrots rather than on sticks, views women as objects to be manipulated rather than as partners in a common endeavor.

Social systems whose positive images of women are all linked to the reproductive role leave women only one path to a sense of purpose and accomplishment. Most societies have gone further, constructing formidable roadblocks along every other path.

A constuctive approach to controlling population growth would be one that sought to dismantle the roadblocks along women's alternate paths, and indeed helped them open new paths toward fulfilment.

Women have many different kinds of needs, just as men do, such as a claim on economic resources, physical health and comfort, security, approval from others, participation in the life of the community, personal autonomy, love, and recognition.

Maternity can realistically be viewed by women as a means of fulfilling their own needs. Where women are isolated within their families, lack opportunities for remunerative employment, and are blocked by illiteracy from contact with the larger society, their choices among possible means to fulfilment are so narrow that child bearing stands out clearly as the preferable alternative.

Parenthood has its own intrinsic rewards, but the ways in which it serves other needs should not be overlooked. If policies and programs can be designed to help women achieve their goals by means other than motherhood, two very important objectives can be met at once: raising the status of women and lowering the birth rate.

Reality Not Enough for Televison

THE PROGRESSIVE
An Editorial

It was approaching midnight, but the Dade County Circuit courtroom was almost filled with spectators. As the clerk read the verdict — guilty of murder of an elderly next-door neighbor — a television camera zoomed in to capture on tape the bowed head of the defendant, 15-year-old Ronnie Zamora.

Thanks to a one-year experiment permitting cameras in Florida courts, tens of thousands of television viewers followed the trial, with its intriguing defence argument of temporary insanity due to television intoxication, almost gavel to gavel. Florida is the fifth state to allow such coverage, and so far the practice is receiving praise from both judges and the public. "I've been in the business 30 years and I still can't get over this," observed a veteran cameraman coverng the Zamora trial. "It's just like 'Perry Mason' — but it's real."

Meanwhile, in Washington, the House of Representatives approved the installation of television equipment to record House sessions, and broadcasters are now haggling with Congress over who will control the cameras.

Government, it seems, is finally swallowing its scruples about the sensationalism of broadcast journalism and is giving in to broadcasters' harangues about freedom of the press and the public's right to know. The argument the corporately owned broadcast media failed to mention, however, is profits. Free, non-union actors and actresses, free sets, and free-form plots with soap opera-like continuity must be alluring prospects to overhead-conscious executives.

The problem with televised trials and congressional sessions is not that television journalism is inherently more biased or commercialized or sensationalized than most print journalism, which is also in the business of selling events to increase stockholder dividends. The problem is that, like the network cameraman, most of us believe that television journalism is somehow more "real."

Television's phenomenal success in the U.S. has been based on its ability to provide a comfortable image of reality — to the point that image and reality flip and the Zamora trial becomes a metaphor for "Perry Mason." Even the network news is packaged into a series of short dramas involving small casts of "stars."

In the end, televised government will probably be foiled by its own success. Broadcasters have created a market that demands a modicum of acting ability, fast and uncomplicated plot lines, and exceptional technical quality — all the ingredients reality consistently lacks. Why should we settle for more?

White House Fallout

russell baker

Sometimes when you're president you learn the darndest things. Like the time Aunt Orra called up and said, guess what, she has just persuaded Hugh Hefner to give up hedonism for quilting bees. Of course that might have happened whether I'd been president or not, I suppose.

One day a fellow came into the office and said, "Mr. President, the nuclear reactors are falling down." That's the kind of thing I mean. The truth is I didn't know there were any nuclear reactors up, but naturally I didn't want to let on I didn't know, as the president is supposed to know everything.

So I put on a very deep look and said, "The nuclear reactors are falling down, eh?"

"I'm afraid so, sir," said he.

I thanked him and called a meeting of top White House advisers. Top White House advisers are the two people you always keep around the White House because they're loyal enough not to go all over Washington telling everybody the president doesn't know everything.

"A fellow just came in here and told me the darndest thing," I said to the top White House advisers. "He said the nuclear reactors are falling down. Get on it right away."

Well, to make a long story short, it turned out some fool has put a lot of nuclear reactors into orbit around the earth while all the environment lovers were distracted down on the ground keeping the electric companies from putting nuclear reactors into power plants. It was a good joke on the environment crowd, I guess, but you don't get to be president by enjoying a joke.

You get to be president by going on television and looking like you're on top of things. I called in the speech-writing boys. "The first point we've got to make," I said, "is that the sky isn't falling down, but just a few little old nuclear reactors."

Somebody said that since most people didn't know the nuclear reactors were up there in the first place, I ought to say what they were up there for. This was one of the dumbest suggestions I'd ever heard, and I said so.

"If I were down here on the ground and somebody told me nuclear reactors were about to start falling," I said, "do you think I'd care why they were up there in the first place? All I want to know is what to do if one of them hits me. What I want to tell the American people in this speech is what to do if you're hit by a nuclear reactor."

After a while the boys came back with a speech that had me urging my fellow Americans to keep calm and not panic if hit by a nuclear reactor, and to take a good shower as soon as possible.

It sounded like a Republican program for dealing with unemployment. As a Democrat, I wanted something that sounded more humane and expensive. That's how we came up with the plan for a program of free government showers for every person with an income under $15,000 who got hit by a falling nuclear reactor.

When you start giving away things like showers to the lower income crowd, of course, you've got to throw in some sweeteners for the big boys if you want to get anything through Congress, so we came up with the falling-reactor-gains tax.

The gist of this was that any business that got hit by a nuclear reactor would get a tax refund equal to twice the cost of the reactor.

With the upper income crowd and the lower income crowd taken care of, this left the middle income people out of the benefits, so we decided to take the high road and appeal to their patriotism and invoke the spirit of sacrifice.

I drafted this part of the speech myself, pointing out that it wasn't every American's privilege to get the opportunity to be hit by a falling nuclear reactor, and that those so honored should be proud to pay for their own showers. I'm sorry I can't phrase it the way we wrote it that afternoon, but a typist left the draft on her desk overnight, and it was hit by a falling nuclear reactor, and the ink ran something awful after it had a shower. It was the darndest thing.

RADIOACTIVE WASTE BASIS FOR LAWSUIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — C.R.F. Holdings, of Surrey, filed a British Columbia Supreme Court lawsuit Thursday against Fundy International Ltd. and Mark Gerald Smerchanski, both of Winnipeg, on grounds it purchased land from the firm which contained radioactive waste.

The Surrey firm is seeking damages for fraudulent misrepresentation, claiming it paid the Winnipeg company $260,000 for property in Surrey which contained radioactive waste.

C.R.F. says it bought the property from Smerchanski in 1974 on the condition that certain industrial waste left on the land was harmless and could be used as land fill.

The firm says another condition of the sale was that Fundy would pay for storage of material and arrange for its removal within a resonable time.

C.R.F. says it has been forced to store the barrelled radioactive waste at considerable expense in a barricaded area because of government regulations on the handling of radioactive properties.

FISH CATCH $163M IN '77

VANCOUVER (CP) — The landed value of the British Columbia fishing catch in 1977 was $163 million, Wally Johnson, regional director-general of the federal fisheries department, said Thursday.

He said the landed value of salmon for 1977 was $106 million, which represented $230 million at the wholesale level.

The landed value of herring for 1977 was $25.3 million, which represented a wholesale value of $90 million.

HATTER ADMITS MORALE LOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — New conservation officers coming out of the British Columbia Institute of Technology are more interested in becoming resource managers than policemen, Dr. James Hatter, former fish and wildlife director, said Thursday. Hatter told a provincial inquiry into the issuing of guiding licences that there is a morale problem in the branch but said it was not as extensive as suggested by some witnesses.

Hatter said that the branch's predecessor, the B.C. Game Commission, was nothing more than a policing agency and many of the older members have not been able to adapt to the new concepts of resources management.

Window Deal Frosts Many

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Better Business Bureau was flooded with calls Thursday from persons complaining they had received nothing after paying deposits to an insulated window company.

A bureau employee said the callers told her they had put down amounts of up to $1,000 in advance for installation of double glazing in their homes.

The payments, she said, went to a company known as Dupex Energy Ltd., of Port Coquitlam. Dupex staged an extensive television advertising campaign last fall, offering discounts on thermal windows.

Vince Forbes, head of the bureau, said Dupex is run by Alfred Paul Allen, 33, who ran a health spa which closed its doors abruptly, leaving a number of persons with contracts but no facilities.

Dupex began in 1974 as Avon Weight Control Centres Ltd., again with Allen as president.

Forbes said this company operated a health spa in Vancouver for a few months before closing its doors in October, 1974.

Some of the contracts were picked up by another, unconnected, health spa but a lot of people got hurt, he said.

Forbes said Allen sold several Dupex franchises, including one in Victoria for $25,000 and others in the Vancouver area for $10,000 to $15,000.

The operators of these franchises, he said, later complained that they could not get any business because of high prices they had to pay Allen for windows.

He said bureau investigations have shown that Dupex was charging customers $15 and up a square foot for its windows, compared with established dealers' rates of $7-10 a square foot.

In one case, he said, a man was charged $65 a square foot.

Forbes said the bureau has information Dupex owes $53,000 to the advertising agency which handled its TV, flyer and magazine campaign; $22,000 to one glass supplier and smaller amounts to others including British Columbia Hydro, B.C. Telephone and the landlord of its Port Coquitlam premises.

Trucks leased by Dupex have been towed away, Forbes said, and a garnishee order put on its bank account by the federal government for $35,000 in unpaid income tax, unemployment insurance and Canada Pension Plan contributions.

He said the bureau has been told that the company was grossing $200,000 a month last fall.

The bureau has been unable to find Allen recently, Forbes said.

Records in Victoria show that Allen started the company in 1976 as Dupex Energy Sealants Ltd.

The name was changed to Dupex Energy Ltd. last October and then changed again in December to MILLENIUM Enterprises Ltd. Allen was listed as president of the company throughout these changes.

In December, the company's resources and some 250 installation contracts totalling $36,395 were sold to another Allen company, Dupex Industries Ltd, the records say.

Charges Follow Contest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd. and Standard Brands Canada Limited—Standard Brands Canada Limitee were charged Thursday with failing to meet requirements of the Combines Investigation Act in a contest in one Super Valu supermarket.

The companies are charged in connection with a contest at a West End store on May 16, 1977, in which they are alleged to have offered five "dream kitchens" as prizes but failed to "make adequate disclosure of the approximate value of the prizes, the area or areas to which they relate and the closing date of the contest, facts that were within the knowledge of the advertiser and which materially affected the chances of winning."

The companies are scheduled to appear in provincial court March 14.

No Exception for Sherrell

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bud Cullen, federal immigration minister, said Thursday that regulations would not be relaxed to allow Robbie Sherrell, a United States citizen, to take over as president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia.

Cullen said Sherrell, appointed this week by Education Minister Pat McGeer, has yet to qualify for a temporary work permit or for landed immigrant status.

"I don't want to get into a shouting match with the B.C. minister (McGeer)," Cullen said in a telephone interview from Ottawa. "They will have to follow the immigration procedures and, in the end, Mr. Sherrell will or will not be admitted."

Immigration officials said that Sherrell is presently disqualified for the job because his landed immigrant status application has yet to be processed.

They also said that ICBC has not produced evidence that no Canadian was qualified for the position. Sherrell, hired from the Hartford Insurance Group in London, England, could not be reached for comment.

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday that the selection was made by the ICBC board of directors and the provincial cabinet endorsed the choice.

"If there is a problem, it's a problem for the ICBC directors, not for me," said Bennett.

He said the problem with the immigration department should be handled by ICBC.

"I am confident in the reputation and abilities of the directors of ICBC," he said.

"I would have preferred to see a British Columbian (appointed), but above all we need a good person."

Bennett said Price Waterhouse, the consultants hired to find a new ICBC president, looked for candidates first in B.C., then across Canada.

NDP Pulls 700 In Kelowna

KELOWNA (CP) — Opposition leader Dave Barrett said Thursday that the Social Credit government spends too much time looking at international capital for an answer to the province's financial troubles.

The NDP leader told about 700 people at a meeting here that the province doesn't need welfare from any international corporations, and British Columbians should become "masters of our own house."

In a campaign-style speech in Premier Bill Bennett's hometown, Barrett said B.C. farmers have been lied to, thousands of young people are leaving the province to seek jobs elsewhere and the province is slipping behind in world markets.

He suggested that profits from Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., a Crown corporation, could be used to purchase MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Vancouver Plywood operation. The company has said it must close the plant, which employs about 700 workers, because it is losing money.

Barrett said the government should consider increasing stumpage rates, capital corporation tax and tree management licence fees to the corporation.

He said that coal royalties should be increased, and also called for a boost in the price of natural gas sent to the United States.

"If we're going to sell our resources, we must get international prices," he said.

Barrett also said that the NDP would open Crown land and make it available to young people on a lease-to-own basis for farming.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were mixed in active mid-afternoon trading today on the Toronto stock market.

Trading halts continued in shares of Thomson Industries Ltd. and Atco Industries Ltd. pending news of a possible takeover.

Thomson Industries, halted at the opening, shot up 1¼ to $16¼ a share in Thursday's trading. Atco was halted about noon with Class A shares unchanged at $13 a share. Class B last traded at $11⅝.

Among other industrials, Nowsco Well Service climbed 1½ to $33½, Maclaren Power A 1¼ to $33, Westburne International ⅝ to $20⅝, S.B. McLaughlin Associates ⅛ to $7½ and Norcen Energy Resources ⅛ to $16⅞.

CAE Industries A dropped 1 to $11¼, Maclaren Power B ⅞ to $32, Canadian Occidental Petroleum ½ to $16¼, St. Lawrence Cement A ½ to $15 and Canadian Tire ½ to $22½.

Roman Corp rose ¾ to $24½, Denison Mines ½ to $56½ and Canada Tungsten Mining ⅜ to $10¾. Rio Algom fell ⅜ to $25 and Kerr Addison Mines A ⅛ to $12¼.

Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum gained ⅝ to $41⅜, Siebens Oil and Gas ½ to $26½ and United Canso ⅜ to $11½. Canadian Superior Oil slipped ¾ to $53¼ and Ram Petroleum ¼ to $14⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed a small loss today, weighed down by concern over the interest-rate outlook.

Losers ran just slightly ahead of gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Digital Equipment led the active list, up ⅜ to $40. A 228,000-share block traded at $39¾.

Texas Instruments fell 4⅛ to $70¼ after the company reported a fourth quarter earnings gain that fell short of some advance estimates.

Marshall Field climbed 1¼ to $34⅝, trading for the first time since Carter Hawley Hale Stores said it would go ahead with a takeover bid which Marshall Field is opposing.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate afternoon trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Volume at 2:30 p.m. EST was 279,100 shares, compared with 343,200 shares traded up to the same time Thursday. Norcen Energy Resources gained ⅛ at $16¾, Pacific Petroleums ⅛ at $38¼, Abitibi Paper Co. ⅛ at $11, Bell Canada ⅛ at $52⅞ and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ at $24¼. Canada Permanent Mortgage lost ⅛ at $17⅝, Shell Canada ⅛ at $15¾ and Investors Group A ⅛ at $8⅝.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market moved moderately lower near the close of active trading today. The Financial Times index was down 1.1 to 459.4 an hour before the close. Leading industrials slipped fractionally with some firming in individual issues. Oil and mining issues declined.

Tax Tips '78

Tax Tips are prepared by Revenue Canada. Readers with additional questions may contact the Victoria office of Revenue Canada, 1415 Vancouver St., by phoning 386-2176. Those outside the Victoria dialling area can call toll free at Zenith 0-4000.

Q. I filed my income tax return a week ago, but yesterday I received another T4 slip I had forgotten about. What should I do?

A. Write to the Taxation Data Centre serving your region and attach a copy of the T4 slip. Above all, do not file another return for this late T4 slip or for any other information slip you have received since filing your return. Please include your Social Insurance Number or your Account Number with your name and address.

Q. Since filing my income tax return, I have been transferred to another province. I am expecting a refund. How do I notify the Income Tax Department about my change of address?

A. You should write to the Taxation Data Centre serving your region, giving your full name, new address and any other identification, such as your account number, Social Insurance Number and your previous address, and advise that you are expecting a refund. (You should also notify your post office and your former District Taxation Office of your change of address.).

Q. My Social Insurance Number printed on my personalized tax return is not the same as the number on my T4 slip. How do I correct this?

A. If your Social Insurance Number is incorrect on your T4 slip, notify your employer and ask him to make the necessary correction. If the number is incorrect on your income tax return, cross out the wrong number and enter in the correct number.

Q. I did not receive a T4 slip from my previous employer. Do I have to report the income?

A. Yes, all the income must be reported. Employers are required to forward T4 slips to the last known address of the recipient on or before February 28 each year. If you have not received a T4 slip by the second week in March, you should contact yor employer.

After all reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the information slip, your income and deductions, Canada Pension, Unemployment Insurance Premiums and Tax Deductions should be estimated on your return. Forward pay stubs if possible. Attach a letter stating that you were unable to obtain a T4 slip and outline the estimated information. Also, give your employer's full name and address.

Q. I want to contribute to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. I understand I am allowed a maximum of 20 per cent of my earned income or $5,500 providing I am not covered by a registered pension plan at work. What is considered as "earned income" in this situation?

A. For purposes of the RRSP calculation, earned income includes salary and wages, tips and gratuities, pension income, net income from self-employment, rental income, and other income such as alimony, less: the employment expense deduction, rental loss, Unemployment Insurance premiums, annual union and professional dues, allowable legal expenses of an employee, losses from self-employment, and losses from rental of real property.

If you were also covered by a Registered Pension Plan through your employer, the combined deductions for both plans are limited to the lesser of $3,500 or 20 per cent of earned income. For more detailed information refer to Item 22 of your 1977 Tax Guide.

Q. Can I buy a Registered Saving Plan for my spouse and still claim the deduction?

A. Yes. However, the maximum amount normally deductible by you still applies. This would include your RRSP, your spouse's RRSP and your company pension plan contributions. For more details, read Guide Item 22 of your 1977 Tax Guide.

Q. Can I transfer my RRSP to another organization without paying tax?

A. Yes. Register a new RRSP with the second organization, then arrange that the funds from your old plan are transferred directly into the new one. There is no tax on the amount transferred to the new plan.

Q. My husband died and I received a refund of the premiums he had paid into a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. Am I required to pay tax on the amount of this refund?

A. A refund of premiums is ordinarily treated as income of the recipient. However, a refund of premiums after death will not be taxable in the spouse's hands if it is transferred during the year or within the first 60 days of the following year to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. You can also use the refund of your husband's premiums to purchase an Income Averaging Annuity Contract.

Q. I contributed to an RRSP this year, but have not received a receipt for it. Should I file my return anyway?

A. We suggest that you check with the issuer of the plan before filing your return. If you claim a deduction for an RRSP you must have an official receipt (interim receipts are not acceptable).

If you file now without the official receipt processing of your return will be delayed and your deduction may not be allowed. However your return must be filed by April 30.

Q. I contributed to my wife's Registered Retirement Savings Plan. Can I claim the deduction from my income?

A. Yes, you can claim the deduction from your income. However, effective April 1, 1977 contributions will be taxed in your hands if the funds are withdrawn within three years from the year in which you contributed them. For more information see Item 22 in your 1977 Tax Guide.

Q. The Family Allowance cheques received for our children are made out to my wife. Does this mean she must report the payments as income?

A. The individual who claims a personal exemption on behalf of a child for whom the payments are received must report the payments as income. If neither parent claims an exemption, the person to whom the cheques are made out must report the income. For further information, refer to Item 7 of the Income Tax Guide provided with your income tax return.

Local Anglicans Join Breakaway Group

The group, which numbers about 25, is part of a continent-wide movement which is protesting modernization moves within the Episcopal (United States Anglican) Church and the Anglican Church of Canada, principally the ordination of women priests.

Incorporated under provincial legislation as St. Athanasius' Mission, the Victoria group holds services at Grace Lutheran Church at 2 p.m. each Sunday.

Rev. Peter Wilkinson, who was trained in England, is the rector of St. Athanasius, while Canon R. C. Hemstock is associate priest. Wilkinson has assisted at Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria but has never had a parish before.

Hemstock was a priest in eastern Canada and New Jersey before retiring to Victoria.

The North American Anglican Church was formed at a meeting of disenchanted Anglicans in St. Louis last September. According to L. Denis Byrne, who was a people's warden at St. Barnabus' Anglican Church in Victoria until recently and before that a lay leader in the Anglican church in Edmonton, it now boasts 120 parishes in the United States and a growing movement in Canada.

Missions or parishes have been or are being formed in Vancouver, Edmonton, Ottawa and Toronto, among other places.

The North American Anglican Church's status will probably be settled in July at a conference in Lambeth, England, when all groups in the Anglican communion will meet to attempt to resolve differences, principally over the ordination of women.

Last Saturday, in Denver, Colorado, four bishops were consecrated to serve the new church.

Bryne said the principal reason for the breakaway movement is that the ordination of women priests has set back the cause of church unity 100 years.

NEW SERVICES FOR THE DEAF

A new office to provide additional services to the deaf has been opened by the Deaf and Hard of Hearing Institute of Vancouver Island.

The office at 671 Fort has a full time staff including social worker Susan Corman and secretary Merle Bell.

Lyn Siddaway, assistant director of the Western Institute for the Deaf (WID), said the institute had maintained a small office on a part-time basis but felt the need for more services.

The deaf and hard of hearing of Victoria now number about 250.

The office's main work will be job placement for the deaf and hard of hearing.

Another important service will be personal, family, and group counselling.

Fish Talks Slated

TOKYO (AP) — Japan, the United States and Canada will meet in Vancouver Feb. 7-8 to negotiate a North Pacific salmon fishing agreement, the Japanese fishery agency announced today.

Officials said the three countries also will resume negotiations on a new over-all North Pacicif fishery agreement to replace the 1953 international convention, made obsolete by 320-kilometre (200-mile) fishery zones.

The three countries could not reach a new agreement during talks here last month.

The three-country international convention for high seas fisheries in the North Pacific will expire Feb. 10, since the United States announced its desire last February to end it.

Wolfe Listens to Tax Beef

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier said Thursday he was greatly encouraged by the response of the provincial cabinet to a city brief calling for changes to the Assessment Amendment Act.

Glazier, who presented the brief as chairman of the city's finance committee, said Finance Minister Evan Wolfe has indicated he'd like to discuss the matter in more detail in the near future.

"Having just seen our brief for the first time that's the most we could expect from him," said Glazier following his meeting with cabinet.

The city is asking that apartments, now included in the same property category as single family dwellings and condominiums, be taxed the same as commercial properties.

The change would mean apartments would have a taxable assesed value rate of 25 percent rather than the 15 percent they now enjoy.

Glazier said that under the new system single family and duplex properties are paying 13.9 per cent more of the taxes than they were on the 1977 tax roll while apartments are experiencing a downward tax shift of 30.7 per cent.

"The public understands this situation," said Glazier.

WIRES BREAK

Snow-laden branches over power lines caused a series of blackouts from about 2 a.m. today in the West Saanich—Highlands area.

B. C. Hydro said houses in the West Saanich Road and Willis Point neighborhoods were affected but all were back to normal by the time most homeowners arose.

Que. Splits Grit Support

MONTREAL (CP) — Supporters behind the two men vying for the Quebec Liberal leadership are weighing up in a fairly even split between old-line candidate Raymond Garneau and newcomer Claude Ryan.

While Garneau, a former Liberal finance minister, is attempting to build a more grassroots base, Ryan, former publisher of the Montreal daily Le Devoir, is gaining support from the more activist and intellectually orientated elements of the party.

Each of the province's 110 ridings will select 24 delegates to the leadership convention this spring.

Garneau, who has been courting riding associations for the past year, already has promises of support from 25 sitting or former members of the national assembly. Most of his support stems primarily from party stalwarts who never rose to prominence but have a solid grip on their riding associations.

Ryan, on the other hand, is supported by a majority of prominent Liberals, but only 20 former or sitting members of the national assembly have come out in his favor.

However, in caucus support, Ryan is ahead 8-4, with three former cabinet ministers backing him compared with one for Garneau.

The differences between the two were reflected in announcements by Yvon Picotte, Liberal member for Maskinonge, and Michel Gratton, Liberal member for Gatineau.

Picotte praised Garneau Wednesday for his long record of service within the party and criticized Ryan for slaps taken at the former Bourassa administration.

"I find it hard to understand how a candidate for the leadership of our party can allow himself to criticize the former Liberal administration while at the same time praising only those people in the former team who now support him," Picotte said.

Gratton said Thursday he had become "convinced that (Ryan's) intellectual honesty and personal integrity inspire the greatest confidence among Quebecers in all spheres of our society."

His statement led the president of the Liberal organization in the Outaouais region, Claude Tessier, to come out in favor of Garneau with the statement:

"Mr. Gratton has a right to his opinion, but it is not up to him to decide that a candidate from the outside can command attention simply because he has written so many editorials over 15 years.

LESAGE RALLY

MONTREAL (CP) — Former Quebec premier Jean Lesage is giving new life to the slogan of Quebec's Quiet Revolution—"maitres chez nous"—as the rallying call of federalist forces opposing independence.

In a letter to the 70,000 members of the Quebec Liberal party, Lesage writes: "We can be 'masters of our own house' without the unjustifiable risk of separation."

"Maitres chez nous" was the Liberal party's slogan during the 1962 provincial election when Lesage's government won re-election on a platform to nationalize Quebec's private power companies.

Fear of Foreign Spies Cited for PQ Raids

MONTREAL (CP) — The former head of the RCMP's security service says at least six countries had spies operating in the Montreal area in the early 1970s and at least two of the countries were directing their espionage at the Quebec separatist movement.

John Starnes, testifying Thursday at the Keable inquiry into illegal RCMP activities, cited fear of foreign infiltration as one reason he authorized a Jan. 9, 1973 police raid to steal Parti Quebecois membership and financial information.

Computer tapes containing the information were copied and then surreptitiously returned.

Starnes said he believed the raid, dubbed Operation Ham, was legal, and he took precautions to ensure the PQ material never went outside the security service.

He never informed either the solicitor-general or the RCMP commissioner about the raid, Starnes said.

"The reason for this is very clear in my mind. To have asked ministers or informed them would have given the operation a political flavor or orientation which it never had or was intended to have."

Despite his disavowal of political motives, however, Starnes acknowledged that the Mounties hoped to find information in the tapes about the so-called Parizeau Network of Parti Quebecois sympathizers in the federal civil service.

The information-gathering network was named for Jacques Parizeau, now the Quebec finance minister, who has defended it by saying it is common for disenchanted civil servants to leak information to opposition parties under all governments.

But Starnes said he believed the PQ net was "subversive, seditious and I suspect in some cases treasonable" because it leaked information protected under the Official Secrets Act.

Among the leaks attributed to the Parizeau network was one involving an armed forces contingency plan for dealing with disorders in Quebec. The plan caused an uproar when it found its way into newspapers in the province.

Starnes said he also hoped the raid would find evidence of foreign financing of the PQ, and uncover the names of former Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists who were suspected of joining the party.

He said he retired from the security service before analysis of the tapes was completed, but he gathered from earlier testimony at the inquiry that they did not yield any of the information the RCMP was seeking.

Commissioner Jean Keable agreed with a request from commission counsel Michel Decary to subpoena documents from the RCMP bearing on Starnes's testimony, even though many of these documents have already been refused to the commission by former solicitor-general Francis Fox.

Earlier, Starnes had insisted that he stood by the federal government's version of an illegal police break-in at a left-wing news agency, the Agence de Presse Libre du Quebec, in October, 1972.

However, it was not clear from Thursday's testimony whether Starnes or former RCMP commissioner William Higgitt had told Jean-Pierre Goyer, then the solicitor-general, about RCMP involvement in the news agency break-in.

Essay Errors Listed

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — An English professor who set out to find samples of grammar and comprehension errors made by students says he has collected hundreds of examples of dangling participles, misused prepositions and convoluted reasoning.

Homer Hogan, who teaches at the University of Guelph, started Operation Lingo a year ago with a grant from the university's senate.

He has concluded that many students and professors have a preconceived idea of what writing should be and, as a result, their writing is pompous and vague.

He said they are more intent on using long words and complex phrases than on communicating.

Examples from his collection include: "My uncle drank himself to the extent that he died," and "Homo erectus is the first evidence of man to have evolved thousands of years ago by anthropologists."

Common errors he found in student papers involved misuse of such simple words as this, as and with.

He said students often show ignorance of practical logic as in: "The question that rises is whether it is feasible to overlook obscure possibilities or to face them as though they existed."

Hogan said he thinks a course is needed that would combine logic and composition.

His writing did not escape criticism. In his first request for material he said he "was collecting a sampling."

He was told the sentence was redundant because a sampling is a collection.

No.1 Finance Woe: Ottawa's Policies

MONTREAL (CP) — The major economic issue facing Canadians is not inflation or unemployment, but is bad government, says a Montreal financial expert.

Dominik Dlouhy, retiring chairman of the Montreal Stock Exchange, told the annual meeting of the exchange Thursday that Canada needs "a return to responsible government."

"Our federal government blames our troubles on world conditions and influences, but that is hardly convincing if we look at the performance of countries such as West Germany, Switzerland and Japan," he said.

Dlouhy, president of the investment firm Maison Placements Canada Inc., took a quick look at Ottawa's management of its budget.

"In the five years from 1974 to 1978, the budgetary deficit will have amounted to aproximately $24.5 billion. The estimated deficit for 1978 alone is in the area of $9 billion with revenues forecast at $33 billion.

"In other words, Ottawa is spending almost 30 per cent more than its income in fiscal 1978. The outlook for 1978-79 is for yet a bigger deficit."

Dlouhy said that Ottawa has lost control of wages in the public sector.

Summer Job Plan Poor: Students

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Union of Students, already worried about summer jobs prospects, was critical Thursday of federal government plans to spend $96.2 million on a summer job program this year.

Student spokesman Dan O'Connor said the grant will provide 60,000 jobs, the same number provided by a $95-million program last summer.

In the meantime, the number of all unemployed grew by 17 per cent over the course of 1977, O'Connor said.

"There was record student unemployment last summer and the trend of increasing joblessness means that under Mr. Cullen's program the summer of 1978 will be even worse."

The national student organization, representing 350,000 college and university students, said "it will take more than puffed up job creation figures to meet the growing demand for summer work."

JOB TAX CREDIT NOW IN LAW

OTTAWA (CP) - Government legislation providing for tax credits to help employers create jobs became law Thursday.

The tax credit bill will allow employers to deduct up to $2 an hour for each new job they create in an effort to create about 50,000 jobs in the next year.

The plan is expected to cost the government about $100 million a year in lost tax revenues.

Gardeners Beat Noranda

MONTREAL (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. has been sentenced by small claims court of Rouyn-Noranda, Que., to pay $1,822 to 14 residents who complained that their trees, flowers and lawns were damaged by toxic gasses from the company mine.

Judge Jean-Charles Coutu said the government's environment protection service had proven that vegetation had suffered in the path of the sulfurous anhydride gas emanating from the Noranda mine on July 11 and 12, 1976, and carried by the wind.

He said he based the decision on the principles of civil law.

Sauve Can't Crack Exclusive Men's Club

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve appears to be making little progress in her attempt to stop government employees from spending public money in the Rideau Club, Ottawa's most exclusive haven for affluent men.

Mrs. Sauve has nothing against overstuffed armchairs, cigar smoke and brandy. But she is opposed to public servants fattening expense accounts in places which bar women from becoming members.

For several years, government employees have been told not to spend public money in establishments which discriminate against women and ethnic minorities. But no one enforces the rule and expense accounts still note lunches and drinks bought at the club.

Mrs. Sauve began her battle in July when she wrote to Maurice LeClair, secretary of the treasury board, asking what regulations existed regarding such clubs.

LeClair replied by promising to circulate the rules to all deputy ministers and heads of federal institutions.

"The government of Canada is committed to work for the elimination of all forms of discriminatory practices, whether these be on the basis of race, color, creed or sex," the rules state.

"In line with that philosophy, the treasury board, in its hospitality directive, requires that departments and agencies shall not patronize any commercial establishment or club which practices any form of discrimination."

SAUVE
... lonely fighter

Treasury board officials contacted this week said reissuing the directive caused not a ripple among the public service.

While government employees must pay their own membership fees in the club, many still entertain associates there at government expense. Includes among club members are several senators and Tony Abbott, small business minister.

The treasury board officials said no one is calculating how much money is spent at the Rideau Club, nor is making any move to stop the flow of public funds.

A spokesman for Mrs. Sauve said this week that she was studying the situation and may take further action if the problem is not rectified.

Stuart Wotherspoon, club president, says he is not aware of the treasury board policy.

He does know that there has been no demand by members to change its men-only membership rule.

In addition to the membership restriction, women are not permitted to eat in the main dining room during certain hours. A separate dining room is provided for members' female companions.

Mrs. Sauve, who says she "will never put my foot in the place," has received the moral support of Treasury Board President Robert Andras.

"I am convinced that the treasury board must take some measures to assure that departments and organizations accept the policy of the board in this matter," Andras wrote Mrs. Sauve last November.

A spokesman for the minister said this week that nothing has been done, other than re-issuing the circular, to enforce the policy.

Goyer Vows He'll Explain

OTTAWA (CP) - Former Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday he will soon appear before the Quebec Keable commission to clarify his role in an illegal police raid at a left-wing news agency more than five years ago.

Goyer told reporters he will not comment on his role in the affair until he appears before the commission. A date for his appearance has not yet been set.

Former RCMP commissioner William Higgitt has told the provincial inquiry he is virtually certain he informed Goyer of the illegal raid within a month of the October, 1972, break-in on the Agence de Presse Libre du Quebec.

Opposition MPs demanded in the Commons that cabinet ministers appear soon before the Keable commission and McDonald commission investigating illegal activities by the RCMP.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham) said contradictory testimony has turned up at the Quebec inquiry concerning the actions of past and present cabinet ministers.

Goyer told the Commons in June he could not recall being briefed on the affair by the RCMP. He said Thursday he stands by his earlier statements.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen told Lawrence Goyer has already expressed his willingness to appear before the commissions and that it is up to the independent bodies to call witnesses.

Lawrence asked Jean-Jacques Blais, facing his first question since his appointment earlier in the day as the new solicitor-general, who was telling the truth--Higgitt or Goyer.

Blais asked for time to study the matter before answering.

Earlier, former prime minister John Diefenbaker called on the Liberal government to hold off on promised new legislation allowing the RCMP to intercept mail until the McDonald commission can make a recommendation on it.

Diefenbaker also urged that the commission make its final report within two months and that former solicitors-general appear immediately before it.

Revolving Door Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative John Crosbie said Thursday the "whirling dervish syndrome" of resignations, retirements and appointments in the Liberal government requires a revolving door at the residence of Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger.

The St. John's West MP attempted unsuccessfully to move a motion in the Commons expressing concern for the wear and tear on Rideau Hall where Jean-Jacques Blais was sworn in as new solicitor-general Thursday.

He said:

"In view of the wear and tear this (Whirling dervish syndrome) causes to the furniture and fixtures of Rideau Hall, the time that must be taken by various government assistants to arrange the swearing-in of new ministers, and the degree of difficulty caused in co-ordinating these frequent ceremonies with the busy travel schedule of the prime minister, I move. . . .

"That this government consider including in the main estimates sufficient money to pay for a revolving door at Rideau Hall . . . ."

Protection for 'Weather-Forecasting' Goats

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon Highway Department plans to erect goat crossing signs on Interstate 5 in Roseburg.

The signs are an attempt to protect a herd of weather-predicting goats that graze on nearby Mount Nebo and occasionally roam onto the freeway's grass verge.

The goats, who have roamed the hillside for several decades and have no owners, gained noteriety when local residents and radio station KRSB used them to predict the weather. The higher the goats are up the 1,200-foot mountain, the better the weather.

At 4,500 Pounds, That's a Real Eyeful

Experts say the operation at the Brookfield Zoo was the first of its kind.

The delicate surgery on Pasha, the only male in the zoo's herd of four pachyderms, took more than two hours in a makeshift hospital in the elephant's stall.

It was performed with an ultrasonic probe, whose vibrations broke up the thin, milky covering of the eye. Dr. Samuel Vainisi, a Green Bay, Wis., veterinary ophthalmologist, performed the surgery, backed up by three other specialists, and 15 keepers and zoo veterinarian staff members.

"One of the main concerns was keeping Pasha absolutely still by injecting him with an immobilizing agent," said zoo director George Rabb. "The operation took longer than expected. Some of the cataract had crystalized and pieces had to be sucked up with an aspirator. The eyeball, a little larger than a walnut, had to be removed."

SUN LIFE MUST PAY

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court has ruled that Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada must pay a $35,000 insurance policy on the life of a man who died the day after the policy was issued.

Mr. Justice Donald Morand said evidence concerning the death of Robert Caban, 25, of Peterborough did not support the company's claim that he had committed suicide.

GOYER FACING LIBEL SUIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer is the defendant in a Supreme Court of Ontario libel suit scheduled Monday.

The case dates to 1976 when a supply department official was transferred from a $1-billion Lockheed Aircraft Corp. project for allegedly misinforming his minister.

Goyer, speaking in the Commons June 1, 1976, said the official, L. H. Stopworth, had been removed as deputy head of the project office.

Lombardo Brothers Feud Over Direction of Group

MIAMI — Victor Lombardo has left Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians after striking a sour note with the band famed for "the sweetest music this side of heaven."

Victor, who closely resembles his late brother, gave television viewers a twinge of nostalgia this New Year's Eve when he conducted the Royal Canadians in their annual appearance at New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

For many years Guy had presided over the performance, capped by a mellow rendition of Auld Lang Syne. After he died in Houston last October at age 75, Victor, who had left the band in 1971, was brought back to front it.

He said he decided to leave the Royal Canadians again last week because of "little differences" with his other surviving brother, Lebert.

But Lebert says the differences weren't little at all and that Victor, 66, was ousted for trying to alter the band's traditional sound.

"He wanted to make changes," said the 72-year-old Lebert, one of the original partners in the band with brothers Guy and Carmen. Carmen died in 1971.

"I want to run the band like Guy. I don't want to change one thing," Lebert said by telephone from West Palm Beach, Fla., where the band was performing. "He (Victor) wanted to fire four guys. He had no authority to do that."

Priscilla Files Big Suit Against Elvis' Estate

MEMPHIS — Priscilla Presley, former wife of Elvis Presley, has filed a claim for about $357,000 from the late singer's estate as the balance of a settlement she was awarded in their 1973 divorce. Mrs. Presley also asked that the estate provide the other money and benefits for her and their daughter, Lisa Marie, as provided in the divorce decree. Included in probate court records checked Thursday was a claim for more than $356,900 as the balance of $725,000 awarded to Mrs. Presley in the divorce. The amount was to have been paid in monthly installments of $6,000 or more and was to have been paid in full by Aug. 1, 1982.

NEW YORK — Actress Diane Keaton and ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov are at the top of the 1977 International List of Best Dressed Men and Women that includes football players, political leaders and novelists. Miss Keaton was cited by a committee of fashion editors for her style, described as: "a men's felt hat pulled way down on her head and an open man-tailored vest over a feminine pastel silk blouse and skirt." Baryshnikov, a Russian dancer who played a leading role in the film The Turning Point, has influenced men's styles with his "romantic-macho dress," the committee said.

BEVERLY HILLS — Johnny Cash usually sings, not emotes, for a living. He has only acted in a Columbo, a Little House on the Prairie and a 1970 movie, A Gunfight. But on Feb. 24, he is in a CBS movie, Thaddeus Rose and Eddie, playing an aging, happy-go-lucky Texan who hopes for a new start in life — and gets rooked — when he trades in his ranch for a dream. Nashville's main man of country music grinned slightly when asked why he does not visit the acting department more often. "Well, I looked at my schedule this morning," he said. "I'm booked up into November '78. And usually when a movie offer comes along, they want to do it sometime in the next few months. With television, it's next week."

Katmandu Welcomes Teng

KATMANDU — Chinese vice-premier Teng Hsiao-ping received a colorful but restrained welcome when he arrived today on a three-day official visit to Nepal.

The trip — Teng's second abroad since his political rehabilitation last July — is regarded here as the most significant contact between the two neighbors since the late Chinese Premier Chou En-lai last visited Katmandu in 1960.

The 73-yer-old vice-premier was welcomed by Prime Minister Krtinidhi Bista.

During Teng's visit, Nepal probably will press for an increase in Chinese aid, which has tapered off in recent years, the opening of the legendary forbidden region of Tibet to international tourism and a possible route for Royal Nepal Airlines across China via Lhasa to Hong Kong.

Now, Haldeman Tells All

NEW YORK — Disgraced former White House chief of staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman has broken his long silence on the Watergate scandal in a book considered so hot that its publishers are treating it like literary plutonium.

Security men guard each stage of the production process to make certain there are no leaks and only those who absolutely must may see the book.

Meanwhile, top executives in New York publishing are freely predicting — sight unseen — that Haldeman's book The Ends of Power will become the No. 1 bestseller in the United States when it is published Feb. 27.

The publisher, Times Books, insist that what is going on is a natural phenomenon and because of the nature of publishing business, in which returns are frequent, they are not foisting copies on any one.

The reasons for all the interest is that The Ends of Power is reported to answer all the unanswered questions about the scandal which drove Richard Nixon from the White House.

In the book, the publisher says, the imprisoned Haldeman says what was in the celebrated 18½-minute White House tape that was erased.

He discloses the identity of Deep Throat, the major source for reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein's Watergate expose. He tells when his former mentor, President Richard Nixon, learned about the June, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex.

He also tells what Nixon's reaction was, how much he knew and when he knew it.

Indian 'Fleecing' Raked by Grace

The unfriendly Nootka Indians at Friendly Cove can think again if they think they're going to fleece the government, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Thursday.

McCarthy said that there's no way the province is going to meet recent demands by the Indians who have been threatening to boycott Captain Cook celebrations unless they get a new longhouse, fishing boats, sewers, housing, cable television and a few other things.

"The demands . . . are beyond the financial and moral capabilities of government," McCarthy said. "It would see us being placed in a position of being asked to purchase goodwill at an outrageous price."

McCarthy said the Indians have been offered $200,000 for a longhouse but that's as far as the government's going in peace offerings.

The Nootkas at Friendly Cove were the first native people to make contact with Captain Cook who made his initial landfall on B.C.'s coast at nearby Resolution Cove. The Indians traded away a fortune in sea otter pelts for trinkets.

PACT HOPEFUL AT AIRWEST

A spokesman for AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees — on strike for 83 days — said today there are indications a tentative agreement could be reached next week.

He said negotiating sessions have been set for Sunday and Monday in Vancouver between company representatives and the Teamsters Union. He said the company has hinted it is willing to move from its previous position.

"We're hopeful there will be a contract to take to the members next week," he said.

A bargaining session scheduled for Toronto last week never took place because negotiators were unable to reach the city due to a severe winter storm.

Since the strike began Nov. 13, management personnel have been maintaining limited service, mainly the harbor-to-harbor run between Victoria and Vancouver.

About 95 employees, including pilots, mechanics and office personnel, are involved in the dispute over a contract to replace one which expired Oct. 31, 1976.

It will be a first contract for the Teamsters Union.

Warning On Pills

OTTAWA (CP) — Birth control pills manufactured by the end of April must include a brochure warning women who smoke and women over 40 not to use them, the health department announced today.

A department spokesman said the brochure must include a list of recommendations recently drawn from a federal government report on reproductive physiology.

Among the warnings:

—Women over 40 are advised against taking the pill.

—Women should know of a relationship between cigarette smoking, increasing age and heart attack. Taking the pill further increases the risk of heart attack.

—A woman wanting to become pregnant should cease taking the pill at least three months before conception to allow for normal menstrual flow.

—The pill should not be taken during pregnancy as its hormones will interfere with the normal development of the baby.

—A doctor should be consulted before use of the pill is resumed following a pregnancy, especially if the mother plans to nurse.

—Hormones in the pill are known to accumulate in mother's milk and could decrease its flow.

Dr. Ian Henderson of the federal drug directorate said the recommendations will be sent to all physicians by manufacturers.

The package inserts will give women much more information regarding the composition and risks involved in using the pill, the spokesman said.

Polanski Sympathy Appeal

PARIS (AP) — Fugitive film director Roman Polanski, who fled to Europe only hours before he was to appear for sentencing on a sex charge in Santa Monica, Calif., said today he has not yet decided on when or how he will explain his action.

A New York Post reporter who reached Polanski at his Paris apartment by telephone Thursday night quoted him as saying:

"Please have sympathy with my problems. I don't want to talk too much about it today. I will make a statement when the time is right but I don't know when that will be.

"I am on my own here working it out. No one is helping me. I will do everything on my own. When I will make a statement I will give it myself."

"Everyone wants to know if I will go back to Los Angeles but I can't answer that. Too much is involved."

Post reporter Doug Thompson in Los Angeles said Polanski, 44, abruptly hung up the telephone when asked whether he ever plans to return to California.

The director of such movies as Rosemary's Baby and Chinatown arrived in the French capital Thursday. He had flown to London on Wednesday.

He faced a sentence ranging from a period of probation to a maximum 50 years in prison on his plea of guilty to having sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl. Other charges of rape, sex perversion and drug abuse were dropped in a plea-bargain arrangement.

Polanski is a French citizen and cannot be extradited from France. It would be possible for California authorities to send all evidence in the case to France and French officials could decide to prosecute the case. This was considered unlikely, however.

Sandwich Boards Bitten

City sidewalks are for people not sandwich boards, so bookstore owner Don Gill has to keep his off the street.

Cty council's economic development committee made the ruling Thursday.

Gill had appealed after running afoul of a Victoria bylaw by advertising his shop on a sandwich board outside his Fort Street doorway.

Gill said his sign has been instrumental in drawing potential customers and he wanted council to change the law so that he and other merchants could legally use them.

But Mayor Mike Young shook his head and said that if one sandwich board is allowed, there would soon be hundreds.

In an apparent attempt to soften the blow, committee chairman Ald. William Tindall told Gill the city will take your views under advisement, whatever that means.

Exercise Set For Reserve

Naval reservists from as far east as Thunder Bay, Ont. will take part in an international shipping and communications exercise in the Strait of Juan de Fuca Saturday and Sunday.

TOWN TALK

One of Town Talk's unpaid informers tells us that those vague rumors of a new weekly newspaper being launched in Victoria are now taking on greater substance, and the first issue of the journal — to be called the Victoria Sun — could be out as early as mid-March.

This, despite the fact that the principal money man behind the venture, former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen, is still saying "there's a very, very small basis" for the rumors.

According to this column's information, the editor of the new weekly will be Peter McNelly, publisher of the bimonthly provincial affairs magazine B.C. Today, who recently announced that it was suspending publication.

General manager will be Lorne Whyte, who held that position on the former thrice-weekly giveaway, The Victorian.

And the editorial staff is reported to include George Gerhardt, the Victorian's show biz writer.

There have been discussions with with Rollie Rose, publisher of the Ladysmith Chemainus Chronicle, to print the Victoria Sun on the firm's new press in Ladysmith.

And what kind of newspaper can we expect?

According to Pollen, when he first played down the rumor a few weeks ago, it will be a "once-a-week look at Victoria life . . . a sort of successor to the Victorian but hopefully a little bit more sophisticated and balanced."

There will a number of columnists and Pollen says the paper will carry "vigorous opinion from the left, the right and the middle."

ICBC's $80,000 headman-elect, Robbie Sherrell, will need bionic powers to untangle some of the twists in car insurance red tape.

Most drivers have by now discovered that while the corporation demands the form be signed in two places, there's only one place to sign.

Sherrell will also have to learn to live with ICBC's computer, which is a winner if we ever saw one.

We've learned of one man, who lost his licence to the sheriff last year after an impaired charge gave him too many points, who got his ICBC renewal form in the mail anyway — with a $29 discount for safe driving.

A group of S.J. Willis students almost lost their Mediterranean cruise after working for the trip two years.

The 20-day cruise was scheduled to begin at the March spring break — but after getting permission from Greater Victoria school board, the group of 30 students and two teachers were informed it was booked solid.

Thanks to a little wheeling and dealing by New World Educational Cruises, the students are going on a different cruise that is better than the original, according to Dennis St. Clair, one of the organizing teachers.

The new cruise starts April 16. It's been chopped to 16 days so students only miss two school days and scheduled stops in London have been omitted, but the other ports of call on the intinerary are more exciting, — St. Clair says.

POLYGRAPH ON UPSWING

Don't Call It A Lie Detector

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Only an iron-clad alibi these days eliminates the possibility a crime suspect will be asked to take a polygraph test.

The polygraph — a sensitive instrument that monitors physiological responses to measure truth or deceit — is one of the most controversial investigative techniques used today.

In North America about two million polygraph examinations take place every year.

So far polygraph operators in the United States are ahead of Canada in creating uses for the sophisticated device.

They use it not only to aid criminal investigations, but for lucrative commercial purposes like screening job applicants and nailing cheating husbands.

But interest is increasing rapidly in Canada and the B.C. attorney-general's ministry is considering licensng examiners.

The RCMP has accepted the polygraph as an investigative tool. There are now 15 full-time operators in most provinces and the force recently opened a unit in Victoria with a full-time expert.

Since he started two months ago, Sgt. Kenn Kardish hasn't been an easy man to track down. As the Victoria polygraph examiner, he's on call to every detachment and all municipal police forces on Vancouver Island. His equipment, which costs several thousand dollars, fits neatly into a small space and can be carried along on out-of-town assignments.

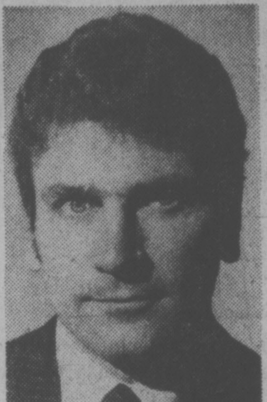
Because the polygraph is a new concept that eludes definition — some call it a science, others an art — its effectiveness is debated by experts in the courts.

In a Vancouver murder trial last year polygraph results were admitted as evidence — rare in a Canadian court — but the jury rejected the evidence and pronounced the defendant guilty.

"There are no guidelines yet," Kardish says, because the technique is in its infancy. Like radar and the breathalizer, the polygraph must prove its accuracy through performance.

The force doesn't consider the polygraph a gauge of guilt or innocence, Kardish emphasizes.

It monitors cardio patterns (heart beat), respiration and skin response to certain questions. The examiner interprets the results of each test and evaluates the whole session, which may last two hours.



KARDISH
. . . Island RCMP expert

Kardish, who was involved in police investigation for six years at the Courtenay detachment, recently completed an intensive two-month course at a New York polygraph school that is used to train all RCMP operators.

There are no polygraph schools in Canada, probably because the demand is not great enough.

All examinations are voluntary and usually begin with a pre-test interview when the subject is informed of his or her rights.

Suspects get the chance to explain their side of the story and Kardish tells them what questions he will ask.

There are no surprises; the suspect is told everything that will happen during the actual test, which usually lasts three or four minutes.

Kardish follows a standard testing program and repeats the test as many as five times until a pattern is established.

It's important the subject relax.

Fear of detection and total recall of the incident in question are neccessary for the test to work.

If a person is truthful, there's nothing to worry about, but if the suspect has something to hide, the instrument will detect deceptive thoughts because the body doesn't lie.

Guilt quickens the heartbeat, causes blood pressure to rise, makes breathing erratic, tenses muscles and moistens palms.

Some people, a very small percentage, beat the polygraph simply because they cannot be tested. Retarded people and those suffering mental illness like schizophrenia are included on this list.

Because there are many unknown areas, the polygraph is used mainly to speed up investigation and seldom as trial evidence.

Breaking into what they see as a virtually untapped market are about a dozen private consultants across Canada.

A Victoria woman, Sharon Perry, hopes to get in on the ground floor by starting her own freelance polygraph business here.

A background in detective work and the lure of an exciting and different career prompted Mrs. Perry to take an eight-week training program at an accredited Los Angeles polygraph school.

One of a handful of graduates, she started work for an L.A. detective agency but decided to return to Victoria.

Mrs. Perry says an interesting highlight will be informing the public here about the polygraph and its capabilities while destroying the myths.

Contrary to popular belief, the polygraph doesn't detect lies; it measures body response to verbal stimuli, she says, and should not be called a "lie-detector."

Convinced the instrument is almost completely accurate, she says a bad examiner can jeopardize the credibility of the polygraph through poor testing and misinterpretation of the results.

Recognized schools use a similar group of standardized techniques, making it possible for different examiners to analyse one set of tests and come up with the same results, she says.

The most popular technique starts with several innocuous questions like "What is your name?" and "Where do you live?" followed by the crucial question of guilt or innocence and a special control question like "Have you ever stolen anything?"

The innocent person is not particularly worried about the crucial question, but the control question should stir feelings of guilt or anxiety. A guilty person would respond the opposite way, according to the theory.

Objectivity, good character judgement and the ability to make the subject relax are three of the most important qualities an examiner should possess, Mrs. Perry believes.

January Tourist Surge Due to Luck, Says Purdy

Victoria had a tourist surge in January but it was the result of luck, not hard work, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

The oldtimers hockey tournament brought 2,000 visitors to the city, pushing the hotel occupancy rate up to 76 per cent instead of the usual January rate of about 25 per cent.

Restaurants also reported a good month.

The figure skating championships also brought business to the city, he said.

Meanwhile, an economic survey conducted by information director Danny Bowes shows Victoria's economy was slightly improved across the board during January compared with the same month one year ago.

The B.C. Forest Products sawmill had three full shifts totalling 530 employees during the month and its plywood division was about 75 per cent of capacity at 340 employees. Victoria Plywood also reported business was fairly brisk.

Yarrows shipyard employed 425 during January, up from 330 in December. Work will continue to be on hand for at least two months although the situation beyond that is not clear. There are hopes for additional contracts.

Construction activity picked up during the month in the industrial and institutional sector.

Five construction projects are about to begin. These are the Inner Harbor walkway, the $4 million Royal Bank building, the Burnside Bridge project, a new Coast Guard base warehouse and the extension to the Clearihue building at the University of Victoria. In addition, work is under way on Ogden Point dock and the demolition of the grain elevator.

The projects will not be labor intensive, however, and unemployment will remain a problem in the construction trades.

Retail sales were surprisingly strong during January, especially for stores that held prices down and advertised their bargains. Volumes were light during the first week but picked up during the last half of the month. Furniture and appliances sold well.

Logging crews had been laid off through Christmas and into the first week of January but by the third week of the month they were back in full production.

Fishing was quiet as usual in January but 1977 was a good year.

Real estate sales in January totalled $9.9 million on 159 units. This was down from $11.8 million on 200 units the previous January. There were 731 properties listed at month's end, up from 654 at the same time last year.

Downtown Burglars Hit Again

Burglars hit three downtown businesses Thursday night, two of them for the second time in a week.

City police arrested three youths after a 1:30 a.m. break-in at the Cook Inn restaurant, 1031 Cook. Seven bottles of beer and two packages of cigarettes were recovered.

Someone smashed a window to gain entry to the Mohawk station at Gorge and Garbally, where about $25 in change was taken from the till. In a similar break-in last weekend a pop vending machine was destroyed and merchandise worth about $125 stolen.

Nothing was taken from Capital Iron and Metals Ltd., 1832 Store, which was broken into a few days earlier.

Crews Unaware Of Suicide Bid

Two ambulance crews — one a highly-trained paramedic team — stood by in the provincial emergency services' Burnside station Thursday unaware a suicide attempt had been reported in the building.

A Saanich police car and ambulance arrived at the scene, lights flashing and sirens blaring, shortly after 4:15 p.m., a spokesman for the crews said.

The paramedics went outside and were told by the police they were answering an attempted-suicide call. They showed the police the entrance to the building.

The incident occurred only hours after Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier presented a brief to a special meeting of provincial cabinet in the municipal hall.

In the brief, Couvelier stressed Saanich should be allowed to continue operating its own ambulance service.

Barry Carlow, shift supervisor at the provincial emergency's despatch office at Royal Jubilee Hospital, said while the Saanich fire department has a direct line, no notification was given about the emergency.

He said in addition to the direct line at Saanich's firehall on Vernon, the department has been given radios for fast communication.

But neither the line nor the radios were used.

"If we get a call closer to Vernon we're not going to try and have a race," Carlow said. "The closest ambulance should respond in the interest of the patient."

"They know we have a station at Burnside. Our paramedics could have grabbed their kit and got upstairs. They could have walked to the case."

Carlow said the paramedics are the most advanced in B.C. and were trained by the Royal Jubilee Hospital and the Victoria General Hospital."

Carlow said Saanich receives about $200,000 a year from the provincial government's health ministry for its ambulance service and Thursday's call will cost the taxpayers approximately $166.

"It's not only embarrassing — the key factor is that it was not in the best interest of the patient," Carlow said.

He said Saanich never notifies the provincial despatch office even when the call could be responded to faster by a provincial unit.

Berths for Factory Ships Urged

Victoria could become the hub of a large West Coast fishing industry if berthing facilities were available for up to 10 trawler factory ships, the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce said in a brief to the provincial cabinet Thursday.

The chamber said such an industry, with vessels in the 150- to 250-foot class capable of catching and processing fish ready for export or local consumption, could provide as many as 1,000 permanent jobs in the Victoria area.

Its brief said the federal government is apparently "prepared to abandon Victoria as a major deep-sea port," and urged the provincial government to press for upgrading and expansion of the present fishing industry.

The physical potential exists because Victoria is the first large port of refuge from the North Pacific, according to the chamber.

"Canada has a 200-mile fishing limit recognized by most countries of the world, but the majority of the fish are being given away," the brief stated.

"This year, Russian, Japanese and Polish trawlers will take thousands of tons of sable, hake, pollock and dogfish from these waters. There is a ready market in various parts of the world for all these fish, either as fillets or in fishmeal form.

"The trawler factory ships that catch and process these fish carry all processing equipment and also between 50 and 80 people to do the work."

Among the actions needed to establish a Victoria-based industry would be:

—Reintroduction of the 35 per cent federal subsidy for fishing vessel construction, and the availability of low-cost loans for the balance;

—Improved wharf facilities to handle up to 10 large trawlers, plus assistance in establishing a cold-storage plant at Ogden Point to receive and store frozen fish fillets;

—More patrol vessels to provide stricter enforcement of the 200-mile limit;

—Limitations on foreign fishing vessel licences as the "Canadian fleet" develops.

"At the present time the Canadian government appears to be doing nothing to encourage Canadian participation in what appears to be a very lucrative and labor-intensive industry," the brief said.

Chamber president John Ansell, who presented the brief when the cabinet met at Saanich municipal hall, said later it was difficult to assess how the fishing industry proposal was received by ministers, but he was encouraged to see "one or two nods of agreement" from various quarters.

Speculators Out of Luck

The Capital Regional District's community planning committee made it plain Thursday no development will be allowed in the area.

For the second time the committee clashed with planners and reiterated its earlier stand that the hospital land will remain in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Planner Jim Masterton argued the new hospital will generate pressure for roads, office space and housing. He said a land-use plan, taking about two months, should be given priority.

"If we don't plan properly it will be just one rezoning at a time," Masterton warned.

"The idea of putting it there was that there would be no change in land-use around the hospital. Our plan there is for no change and I don't see that as a two-month priority job," said Metchosin director Mac Titpton.

Chief planner Peter Hammer said although the present plan was for no development his department would like to examine what would happen should this change.

He told the committee land prices around the hospital site have escalated.

Behind The Scenes

One of the busiest individuals behind the scenes at the Canadian figure skating championships is physiotherapist Haik Gharibians.

Originally hired by the Canadian Olympic Association and now employed by Sport Canada, Gharikians has come to be recognized as the man who tends to the wounds and hurts of many Canadian athletes — in all sports and not just figure skating.

He's always on the go. Within the next seven months, he'll be on hand for swim trials in Regina, the world skating meet in Ottawa and the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

Until 1971, Canada never assigned a medical officer, officially, to teams heading out of the country for international competition. In the 1968 Olympic Games at Mexico, for example, our athletes were hit with a rash of injuries and physical problems. They had to scurry around to seek aid from the medics assigned to other national teams.

While this has been a busy week, Gharikians has been pressing for "two or three more" qualified persons to be hired on a national level.

There was an almost-constant stream through his doors Thursday.

Visitors included:

Kim Alletson, the Ottawa missed who had to withdraw from the senior women's singles because of a knee injury; junior pairs partners Jim Sorochan and Andrea Derby of Oshawa; Sherri Baier of Woodridge, Ont., and senior pairs partners Sharon Hallett, a former Victorian, and North Vancouver's Craig Pearce.

Sorochan suffered a sprained back and Derby broke a tooth during their compulsory skate Wednesday. The tooth was repaired earlier in the day and Andrea skated in Thursday's final, wearing a plastic guard to protect her still-sore teeth.

Hallett spiked herself in practice but the minor cut is not expected to keep her out of competition. Pearce made the trip into Gharikians' room to have a troublesome ankled taped in preparation for practice.

Baier visits Gharikians almost continuously.

The plucky 15-year-old is accustomed to competing in pain. One of the week's casualties, she suffered a suspected fracture of her left wrist in practice.

It was the same wrist she fractured before she and Robin Cowan, 18, of Waterloo, Ont., placed 10th in the world championships in Tokyo last March.

But it won't keep her and Cowan out of the pairs competition which begins today.

"She hasn't skated yet in a Canadian championship without a broken wrist," said Kerry Leitch, the pair's coach.

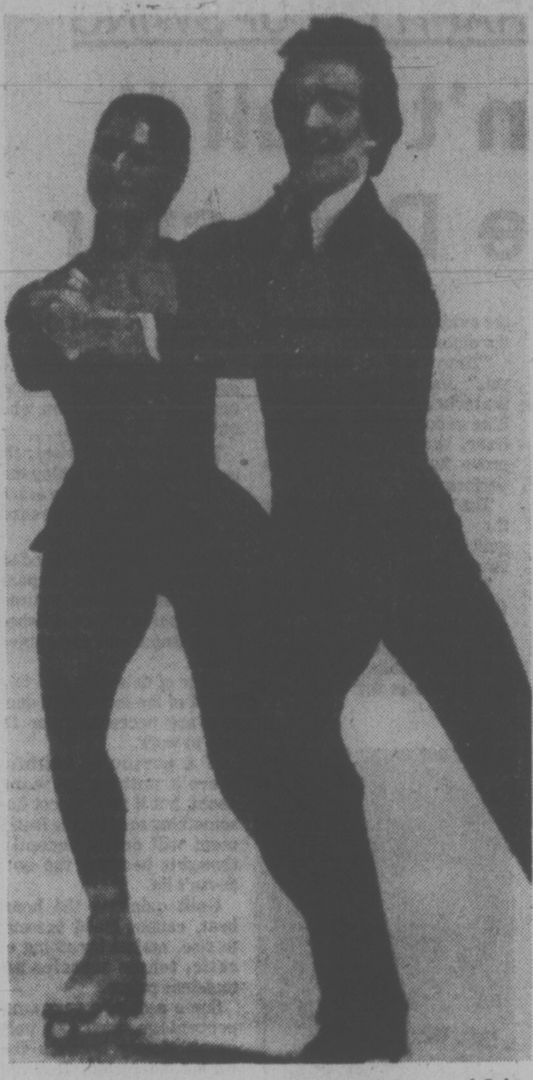
Baier fell on a jump in singles practice and later had the wrist x-rayed. But because it has been broken so often in past, it will be 10 days or so before it can be determined definitely whether it is fractured again.

Baier, who travels with a fibre glass cast for the wirst, will wear it in the competition. Cowan will probably wear a glove to protect his hand from being cut by the cast.

Glory doesn't come cheaply.



GRACEFUL combination of Lorna Wighton and John Dowding skated into first place in Thursday's senior dance compulsory.

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The competition for singles titles at the 1978 Canadian figure skating championships was brought into a sharp focus Thursday.

The competition is, to put it bluntly, developing into a dogfight.

And that includes the senior women's class, where Heather Kemkaran now is being freely touted as the girl that will succeed Lynn Nightingale as national champion.

Kemkaran fashioned a good lead with a solid performance in the figures, the first of three programs that each skater must complete.

She's not out of reach. Strong performances in the compulsory and the freestyle could do it but the real scramble is for second. There isn't a great deal of difference between the girls holding down positions 2-6 —

Peggy McLean of Calgary, Janet Morrissey of Ottawa, Deborah Lynn Paul of Edmonton, Cathie MacFarlane of Calgary and Debbie Albright of Toronto.

The separation margin is only 10 ordinals and 1.28 points.

While winning is the ultimate reward, there is much at stake in finishing second because only the top two skaters get a chance to skate for Canada in the world tournament at Ottawa.

Similar close drama is unfolding in both the men's ranks.

Coquitlam's Jimmy Szabo cut out a slender lead over Brian Pockar of Calgary in the men's singles while Dennis Coi of Vancouver and Montreal's Daniel Beland are neck-and-neck after two events in the junior men's division.

But the race of races is taking place in the junior women's division.

Patti-Lynn Black of London, Ont., has the lead heading into tonight's windup freskate. She has accomplished it without winning one of two events already performed. Patti finished second in Wednesday's figures and second in Thursday's compulsory program.

Joyce Fordyce of North Vancouver won the figures but finished 12th (out of 13) in the compulsory to stand sixth overall. Yvonne Anderson, also out of the North Shore Club, was seventh in the figures but bounced back Thursday to win the compulsory event for an overall fourth-place position.

The fierce competition for positioning in the singles almost overshadowed the performance of Barbara Underhill and Paul Martini. The Ontario couple, performing strongly with a program laden with difficult moves, became the second winners at this year's nationals by taking the junior pairs crown Thursday.

The diminutive but extremely strong-skating Underhill, 14, and her 17-year-old partner, who is almost a foot taller, won out over another Ontario pair, Lorri Baier and Lloyd Eisler. B.C.'s Katherina Matousek and Brad Strachuk took the bronze medal while Victoria's Peter Coomes and Julie Mutcher of Coquitlam were fifth.

Martini and his 85-pound partner have been skating together for only six months but their talents have blended well and their final program included a couple of spectacular throw double Axels.

Mary Jo Fedy and Tim Mills of Ontario won the novice pairs on Wednesday.

Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., second to Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies in the 1977 Canadians and 10th in their first worlds, were well ahead in the senior dance after the compulsories.

In the men's competition, Gary Beacom of Toronto is well back in third place followed by Ken Moir of North Vancouver, Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont., Daniel Beland of Montreal, Vern Taylor of Toronto and Gordon Forbes of Brockville, Ont.

Taylor is the most acrobatic free-skater among the men here but it will take superb performances in the short program (worth 20 per cent) and the free skating (worth 50 per cent) for him to catch the leaders.

Canadiens Tie Canucks With Rally

By Canadian Press

Goals 40 seconds apart by Jacques Lemaire and Rejean Houle capped a furious Montreal comeback in the third period which gave the Canadiens a 4-4 tie with the stubborn Vancouver Canucks in a National Hockey League game at Vancouver Thursday night.

A standing-room crowd of 16,500 at the Pacific Coliseum saw the Canucks twice lead by two goals and some brilliant netminding by Curt Ridley in the best game of the season here.

Montreal also got goals from Pierre Mondou and Steve Shutt in extending their undefeated streak to 19 games, four short of the NHL record shared by Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers.

The Canucks, without a victory here against Montreal in eight NHL seasons, got goals from Claire Alexander, Dennis Kearns, Ron Sedlbauer and Pit Martin.

Ridley made 30 saves and was brilliant in the first two periods against the attack-minded Canadiens. Ken Dryden stopped 22 shots in the Montreal net.

Shutt narrowed Vancouver's lead to one goal on a Montreal power play less than a minute later, getting his 26th goal of the season on a rebound.

Ridley was particularly brilliant in the second period as he stopped both Doug Risebrough and Yvan Cournoyer on breakaways.

The point moved Vancouver to within 11 points of first-place Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division while Montreal moved 24 points ahead of second-place Los Angeles Kings in the Norris Division.

The tie left Vancouver with only five points in 18 games played in the Coliseum against Montreal since the Canucks entered the NHL in 1970.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Buffalo Sabres defeated Boston Bruins 3-1, New York Islanders dumped Atlanta Flames 5-2 and Philadelphia Flyers blanked Colorado Rockies, 3-0.

Jim Lorentz's power play goal at 10:12 of the second period snapped a 1-1 tie and was the margin of victory for the Sabres. The goal came as Bruins defenceman Gary Doak was serving a hooking penalty.

Danny Gare, with his second goal of the night, found the empty-net with 52 seconds left for the final Buffalo goal.

Buffalo goaltender Don Edwards, outstanding in the Sabres' 2-2 tie Wednesday night in Toronto with the Maple Leafs, turned in another steller performance to record his 26th victory, tops in the NHL.

Spectrum Wins

Spectrum picked up its first victory in three starts this season by blanking host Lambrick Park 28-0 in a Greater Victoria High School Rugby League match Thursday.

Andy Rzybowski led Spectrum with two tries and single four-pointers were added by Derek Ash, Dave Freer, Joe Fletcher and Mike Collis. Fletcher also kicked two conversions.

It was the third loss in four starts for Lambrick Park.

Two New Coaches On Western Scene

Doug Barkley has taken over at the helm of Calgary Wranglers while Garry Peters will coach Saskatoon Blades for the balance of the season.

Barkley, a one-time defenceman with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, will be behind the Calgary bench for tonight's game against Brandon Wheat Kings, replacing Brisson, the club's majority owner who remains as general manager.

Like Brisson, Jack McLeod of Saskatoon reduced his work load by appointing Peters, a 35-year-old native of Saskatoon, as Blades' coach.

Peters played professional hockey for 10 years, including four years with Philadelphia Flyers of the National League, before his career was cut short by a knee injury.

In 7½ seasons under McLeod, the Blades posted 265 wins, 206 losses and 58 ties. McLeod led the team to three Eastern Division titles but the Blades have never won a WCHL final.

McLeod, who also is part owner, will continue as general manager.

Meanwhile Victoria Cougars, who may have helped force the coaching changes by defeating both Calgary and Saskatoon within the past week, enjoyed some good news as they prepared for tonight's game with the Pats in Regina.

Already missing Geordie Robertson, their top scorer, Cougars suffered a scare in a 7-4 victory at Lethbridge when defenceman Scott Lang stopped a shot with a foot.

The foot was extremely sore Thursday but trainer Gord Hahn said today that it wasn't broken and Lang, in all likelihood, will be able to play tonight.

Rookie winger Mike Shields suffered a cut over an eye in the same game. He took eight stitches but will definitely play as Cougars attempt to extend their remarkable undefeated road record to six games.

Robertson suffered an injury to a lateral ankle ligament at the start of the road trip and returned home Monday with his leg in a cast. He was scheduled to have the cast removed and undergo a more detailed examination today by the Cougars' club doctor.

Then Robertson will be advised when he can start skating again.

Islanders, Bays May Collide In Rematch

Nanaimo Islanders and Oak Bay Bays appear headed for another showdown.

Both squads, which finished one-two in the Oakleaf Classic at Oak Bay last weekend, advanced to the semi-finals with victories Thursday night in the Western Canada high school boys' basketball tournament in Kelowna.

Islanders, the top-ranked team in B.C., handily beat Glenlawn of Winnipeg 111-81 but Bays had to struggle before getting by Lethbridge Collegiate Institute Rams, 73-71.

The semi-finals are scheduled tonight.

In Greater Victoria League play the same night, Belmont Braves took a stranglehold on first place in Division "A" with an 82-49 victory over Reynolds Roadrunners while Mt. Douglas Rams tripped Esquimalt Dockers, 61-53.

Braves are now 7-1 while Reynolds slipped to third place with a 4-4 record.

Rams were sparked by Russ Mosher's 18-point contribution and Bill Barber led Dockers with 22.

In girls' league play, Victoria Tigers whipped Spectrum 45-21, Mt. Douglas Ramblers downed Esquimalt 57-29 and Reynolds Roadrunners swept past Belmont, 46-11.

Trees Might Benefit From Sewage Plant

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Further to the dumping of tertiary sewage treatment plant products into the headwaters of the Cowichan River . . . One biologist I consulted on the matter came up with a rather unique suggestion for using the end product . . . Why not pipe it into an area where the nutrient rich solution could be used to fertilize trees . . . Some forest companies in the Cowichan Valley area are now spending a lot of money fertilizing areas by aircraft in order to boost the growth rate of commercially-valuable tree species . . . Surely some form of disposal field could be set up between the trees occupying areas adjacent to the treatment plant in order to gain some benefit from what is now a nuiscance.

The left hand taketh and the right hand giveth away . . . It wouldn't be so bad if all provincial government departments had to tighten their belts, but it irks me to see that the highways department was given a $58 million increase on Dec. 10, bringing their budget up to 120 per cent over the previous year — from $109 million to $238 million . . . This padding of the highways budget came mere days after it was revealed the fish and wildlife branch budget had been chopped . . . The cutback means the branch will have to operate on a shoestring basis for the remainder of this fiscal year . . . While conservation officers are sitting in their offices, for want of gasoline to put in their vehicles, we'll all be consoled with the thought that poachers will be able to speed about on nice paved highways.

I believe the Tree Farm Licence which encompasses the Nitinat Triangle area is up for renewal this year . . . Perhaps now we might finally see some action on setting up the remaining boundaries of Pacific Rim National Park . . . Apparently there is an agreement, signed by the former NDP government, which would provide federal funds to compensate the logging company involved for any losses . . . So why the delay?

Speaking about mismanaged tax money . . . The federal solicitor general's department has sent out a massive barrage of 32-page (bilingual, of course) pamphlets entitled Gun Control in Canada - Working Together to Save Lives . . . This writer got two at home and two at the office and there are at least four more floating around the newsroom . . . Multiply that by the number of newspapers in Canada (not to mention the other media) and the expenditure must be astonomical . . . All to justify a gun control system which only create an added bureaucracy while doing absolutely nothing to prevent the loss of lives through either intentional criminal acts or the misuse of firearms . . . I'm willing to bet the crime rate won't be affected one little bit by this piece of cosmetic legislation.

Al Longland won the second annual Royal Oak Inn "Frostbite Derby" in Saanich Inlet at the weekend with a chinook salmon that tipped the scales at 11 pounds, 11 ounces . . . M. Green was second with a 8:12-pounder and a Mr. Mahon was third at 8:11 . . . Hidden-weight winners were R. Smith, J. Kirby and a Mr. Sansbury . . . A total of 84 fish were weighed in for the fishfest.

Steelhead fishing has picked up in the Cowichan, Big Qualicum, Gold and Salmon rivers . . . But the fresh snow that fell earlier this week has made access a bit of a challenge . . . Salmon fishermen going after winter chinooks are finding good returns between the Trap Shack and Church Rock at Becher Bay, off Secretary Island and the Pedder Bay kelp bed, near Brotchie Ledge and off April Point and the Cape Mudge Lighthouse at Campbell River.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Littler Takes Lead In Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Gene Littler, taking advantage of fast greens, putted his way to a seven-under-par 65 Thursday and the first round lead in the $250,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

The 47-year-old tour veteran had five birdies, one eagle and no bogeys on the 7,234-yard Waialae Country Club course.

John Schroder, who tied for second with Littler in last week's San Diego Open, was one stroke behind at 66. Mark Hayes, Eddie Pearce, Dave Stockton and Bob Wynn were tied for third at 67.

All but Wynn were early finishers and did not have as much problem with the wind, which picked up in the afternoon.

Defending champion Bruce Lietzke, U.S. Open champ Hubert Green and Hale Irwin were tied with a half-dozen others at 69. Lee Trevino shot a 70.

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins had a 73 and Arnold Palmer was 10 strokes off the pce at 75.

Describing the greens as in perfect condition, Little attributed his 65 to hisholing of several long putts.

"I holed more long putts today than I have in several months," said Littler, who sank two 40-footers and two 20-footers and needed only 29 putts.

"I probably holed more putts today than I have for six months," he said. "I'm not diriving a strong as I'd like, but I'm hitting straight," he added.

Schroder also found the greens in "absolutely perfect" condition.

"There is no excuse if you miss a putt unless you hit it sideways," he said. "It maybe tough putting from long distances because the greens are so fast, so it will be important to knock it in there close."

The 72-hole tournament continues through Sunday with the winner taking home $50,000.

Vikes Lose Budd Travel to Alberta

University of Victoria Vikings will be down to an 11-man roster for the remainder of the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league season.

Coach Ken Shields has learned that six-foot-five forward Gary Budd, who underwent surgery to remove bone chips from his knee earlier this week, will be lost to the club for the remainder of the season.

Budd, 21, had been inactive for three weeks due to the injury.

"It's very unfortunate for Gary," said Shields. "He's a very keen player and we're going to miss him."

The third-year arts and science student is a former member of the Victoria Scorpions senior "A" team and has two years eligibility remaining in the CWUAA after this season.

Vikings, who travel to Edmonton today for a crucial two-game stand against Alberta Golden Bears, are running in first place with a 12-2 record and are currently ranked seventh in Canada.

LEGION RUN SET SUNDAY

Competition in all classes is offered in the annual Royal Canadian Legion, Trafalgar Branch No. 42, cross-country meet Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

The first race starts at 1 p.m. and entries may be made at the starting line, beginning at 12:30 p.m., or by telephoning Katherine Ellis at 477-4366.

THREE-YEAR PACT

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave Skaggs, who became the first-string catcher for Baltimore Orioles during the last half of last season, has signed a three-year contract with the American League baseball team.

McGowan Loses Pair

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Only two rinks were undefeated after Thursday's first day of the three-day British Columbia schoolboy curling championships.

The foursome skipped by Mark Bartyik of Argyle of North Vancouver defeated Dave Fraser of Smithers 5-4 in the first draw and took an 8-6 decision from John McGowan of Mount Douglas of Saanich in the second draw of the round-robin tournament.

Merritt's Craig Baase also picked up two victories, 5-4 over Fernie's Darren Gigliotti and 9-6 over Jeff Kiland of Mackenzie.

Ferguson Saves Talbot's Job

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers president William Jennings has been overruled in his desire to fire coach Jean-Guy Talbot, the New York Times has reported.

The Times said that Jennings called for the dismissal of Talbot at a meeting with John Ferguson, general manager of the National Hockey League team, and Sonny Werblin, new president of Madison Square Garden, which owns the team. Ferguson apparently convinced Werblin that Talbot should remain as coach.

Jennings, asked whether he had recommended Talbot's firing, told the Times: "I will make no comment except to say that Talbot is still the coach."

Talbot, 45, was named coach of the team this season after serving as Ferguson's assistant coach last season. He has been severely criticized by Rangers players, fans and the press during New York's current losing streak, which reached six games with a 7-6 loss to New York Islanders Wednesday night.

John Entzminger fired two goals to lead Victoria Athletics to a 6-1 South Island Big Six Hockey League victory over Western Homes Buckaroos in a game Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Dennis Sproule averted a shutout for Buckaroos.

Khalsa, Athletics Keep Pace

Khalsa and Esquimalt Athletics each chalked up three wins Thursday night to maintain their one-two pace atop the first division in the Victoria and District Senior "B" Volleyball League.

Khalsa expanded its record to 13-3 with victories over Great Pumpkin (15-10, 15-9) and Namdor II (15-12).

Athletics are now 11-5 after beating Camosun (15-6, 15-6) and Namdor I (15-2).

Flyers Join Braves At Top

Fuller Lake Flyers joined Saanich Braves atop the Patterson Division in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League by blanking Oak Bay Trios 6-0 in a game Thursday night at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Both Flyers and Braves are now 4-1-1 at the midway point of a 24-game round-robin schedule while the Trios are 2-3 and Esquimalt Legion is 0-5.

Don Bodger and Tim Hollett each fired two goals to lead the Fuller Lake attack while singles were added by Ken Ellison and Greg Hollett.

Ken Stanton recorded the shutout in the Flyer goal.

Haden Happy

LONDON (AP) — Unlike at least a few of his team-mates, Los Angeles Rams quarterback Pat Haden apparently is delighted that George Allen will be head coach of the National Football League team next season.

"It's a fantastically good choice and he will do a terrific job," said Haden, studying at Oxford University on a Rhodes Scholarship. "He has a good reputation as an excellent coach and he has met all the challenges that have been given to him. He is inheriting a team with great talent."

Allen was fired as head coach of Washington Redskins shortly after the Super Bowl. On Wednesday the Rams introduced him as their new head coach.

When Allen's ouster was announced, all-pro wide receiver Harold Jackson and several other members of the Rams said they would be unhappy if Allen took over the head coaching job vacated when Chuck Knox quit to assume the head coaching post with Buffalo Bills.

Argos Sign Player

TORONTO (CP) — Running-back J.J. Jennings, who spent brief periods of 1976 and 1977 with Kansas City Chiefs of the NFL, has signed a one-year contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Another Buyer For Cats

TORONTO (CP) — A third group, headed by Toronto publishing executive Charlie Cipolla, has surfaced as a potential buyer for Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League.

Harold Ballard, majority owner of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs, agreed last week to purchase the Eastern Conference team from Michael DeGroote and his partners for a reported $1.3 million. However, the purchase requires the approval of at least seven of the nine CFL clubs, including the three other Eastern teams—Montreal Alouettes, Ottawa Rough Riders and Toronto Argonauts.

Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd. of Vanocuver, a subsidiary of Western Broadcasting Ltd., said this week it will seek to purchase the Ticats.

Davis Has Door Open To Get A's in Denver

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Davis agreed Thursday "to keep the door ajar" and not close out attempts to buy baseball's Oakland A's and move them to Denver this season, American League president Lee MacPhail said.

Davis, MacPhail and commissioner Bowie Kuhn conducted what were termed informal talks over lunch regarding the possible franchise shift, stalled because Davis's attempts to purchase the A's from Charles Finley have been stymied by the team's lease with the Oakland Coliseum.

"We urged Mr. Davis to keep the door ajar in case something could be worked out regarding the Oakland franchise," MacPhail reported. "He said there were heavy pressures on him because of the Triple A club (the Denver Bears) and Oakland and the city of Denver, but he said he'd do his best to keep the door ajar if he could.

"We don't have any more scheduled conferences," MacPhail added, "but we have not given up. We are still hopeful that something can be worked out."

Neither Davis nor Kuhn was immediately available for comment.

Davis, a millionaire oilman from Denver, was set to buy the A's from the beleaguered Finley for a reported $12.5 million—but the deal fell through and Davis's offer was withdrawn when Finley failed to get the club out of the second half of its 20-year lease with the coliseum.

Meanwhile, a $2.5 million suit by Mike Andrews, former Oakland reserve infielder, against A's owner Finley was settled out of court late Thursday.

Robert Gottesman of San Francisco, Andrews' lawyer, said a part of the settlement agreement was that neither side would disclose the amount or other details.

Andrews, 34, sought damages in Alameda County Superior Court because of the circumstances under which he was fired after making two costly throwing errors at second base in the 12th inning of the second game of baseball's 1973 World Series against New York Mets.

He said the A's issued a false report that his throwing arm was impaired by a chronic shoulder injury.

METCALF AN ARGO?

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts say they are negotiating with running back Terry Metcalf, who says he no longer wants to play for St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

Dick Shatto, general manager of the Canadian Football League club, said the Argos placed Metcalf on their negotiation list at the end of the season and that he has talked twice to Metcalf's agent, Richard Bennett of New York.

The Marker is Jack's; The Rock Still a Menace

AROUND OUR SHORES

You won't find it on the chart but there's a marker in Esquimalt Harbor atop a rock that's long been a menace to boats coming into the moorings of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

The rock is situated just outside the moorings and is often almost submerged.

The squadron member who put it there, the marker that is, was almost as red-faced as the hull of the boat he skippers recently.

Jack Bush, who sails the Sailerette Red Start, was awarded the somewhat dubious honor of receiving the Shifting Rock Trophy at the squadron's annual awards night. The trophy goes to the sailor committing the biggest boob of the year.

It appears Jack has hit that particular rock twice, once before he hoisted the marker and — you guessed it — the second time happened when the marker was in place.

Jack, when he's not out on the saltchuk, somewhat aptly heads Saanich's emergency service program.

The squadron honored a father and daughter team on awards night. Olaf Thyvold Sr. and his daughter Tora were presented with the Prosser Trophy for their outstanding service to the squadron.

The squadron's Laser enthusiasts begin a new frostbite series this Sunday, races getting under way at 1:30 p.m.

Laser sailors at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will also have series racing this weekend. They will begin sailing at Cadboro Bay 1:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Doug Gray won two of the three races sailed last weekend. The first time around Charles Simpson and Barry Wright trailed him. Barry won the second race, beating out Charles and Dave Teece. The third time around it was Doug, followed by Charles and Dave.

The club's Catalina 27 fleet will be racing one-design on Saturday. Their first race starts at 10 a.m.

On Sunday, the club will have another long-distance race for keel boats. The start will be in the vicinity of Flower Island at 10 a.m.

Many of the boats taking part were out last Sunday for two around-the-buoy races of the Turkey Head Sailing Association.

Thirty-nine boats competed and Jim Ross' Toogooloowoo won both sailouts, Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer being runner-up each time.

In the second race The Distant Drummer was followed by Saga, John Graeme's Llanoria, Jack Foster's Sly Fox, Danish Pastry, Sunshine, John Dewey's Shuttlecock, Glen Higgins' Freeway and Tuluca.

Part of Toogooloowoo's success on Sunday is probably due to the fact that she had Sidney sailmaker Phil Leitch aboard as crew. Boats have a habit of winning when he's on deck.

Members of CFSA will get a chance to get some tips from Phil on Thursday, Feb 16 when he talks on sails and sailing in the clubhouse at Munro Head. He will get things started at 8 p.m.

For those who can't make the normal Sunday outings, the Victoria Canoe Club plans a trip down the Cowichan River this Saturday. Members will meet at the telephone booth on the highway in Goldstream Park at 8:30 a.m. and the river trip will begin at the Bible camp.

Those wanting to go along should phone Phil Williams at 598-4971 to make sure there are no last-minute changes.

The club's next basic paddling course is now set. Four two-hour sessions will be held in the Crystal Pool from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m. on Sundays, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5 and March 12. There will also be two outdoor sessions. A charge of $20 per person will cover pool expenses.

Those taking the course must provide their own equipment or make arrangements to get it.

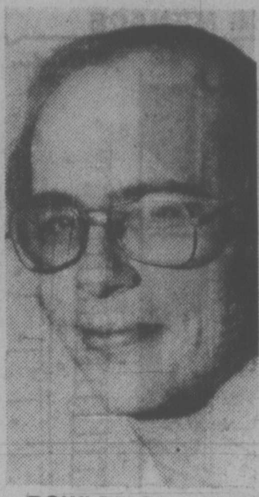
If you're interested you should sign up early because these courses are always popular. The man to phone is Doug Collis and the number, 592-2309.

Murphy To Esks

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos announced Thursday that Cal Murphy has been hired as an assistant coach in charge of the offensive line with the Canadian Football League team.

Murphy has had extensive CFL coaching experience. He was head coach of British Columbia Lions in 1975 and 1976 and an assistant coach last year with the Grey Cup champion Montreal Alouettes.

Murphy coached high school football in Vancouver before becoming an assistant coach at East Washington State University from 1965 to 1967. He was at the University of Hawaii from 1968 to 1972, then at San Jose University before returning to Canada as an assistant coach with the Lions.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish helped Ron Andrew back into winners' list in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Ron captured men's fivepin award during 15th week of 15th annual competition with 267-318-347 — 932 series in YBC Majors League at Town and Country Lanes.

Slew's Future in Doubt

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Turner, who trained Seattle Slew for his 1977 Triple Crown success, has confirmed that the odds are 50 to 1 that Seattle Slew "will never run again."

Turner, recently fired by the colt's owners, said: "Slew now is worth a great deal more in stud than on the race track. Assuming his owners can get the mares to him this year, they can not afford not to stop him.

"It's strictly a matter of economics. His owners spent a great deal of money at the sales last year expecting Slew to win it back for them last fall when there was a lot of money up for grabs. Unfortunately, Slew was injured and we lost the fall campaign."

Turner's comments followed recent reports that Slew would be retired. However, Mickey Taylor, one of the co-owners, has denied the reports.

Seattle Slew has not raced since suffering his only setback July 3 in the Swaps Stakes at Hollywood Park in California. Plans were to run him at Hialeah last week, but they was scrapped after the colt came down with a viral infection.

"How will that stuff get from down there up to my sore throat?"

The Bridge Expert

In theory, a defender slipped in his defence against South's game contract in today's deal. Actually, however, it would be difficult to fault that defender for his play. Can you isolate the defensive error?

Neither side vulnerable.
South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ◇.

On West's opening diamond lead, the four was played from dummy, East's queen capturing the trick. To trick two East led the club king, which was permitted to win. East next led the club queen, which was taken by South's ace.

After drawing trumps, South led his six of spades. When West declined to put up his ace, dummy's jack won the trick. The queen of spades was then played, south discarding the four of clubs as West's ace took the trick. West returned a diamond to dummy's ace, and on the high king of spades South tossed away his remaining losing diamond. Thus his only losers were a spade, a diamond and a club. What was the defensive "error"?

After East had captured the opening diamond lead with his queen, he should have realized that he wanted West in the lead again, to play another diamond. He could probably have gained this objective by leading the five of clubs, not the king.

Actually, the lead of the five didn't figure to be a losing play. Even if South had held the A-10-2 of clubs (instead of the A-4-2), South almost surely wouldn't play the ten-spot, for fear that East's five might be a singleton.

With the low club lead by East, if South played low, West's ten would win. Another diamond lead would now promote East's king into a winner. And if South captured the low club lead with his ace, he would then take his ace. He would then lead the club ten, enabling East to make two club tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, February 4
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (MARCH 21—APRIL 19): Emphasis on achievement, gaining recognition, making room at top — for you. Open lines of communication. Deal with Gemini, Virgo. In matters of speculation, stick to number 5. A written message could contain key to resolving a dilemma.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good moon aspect coincides now with communication, foreign travel, study of language, receipt of call or message from another nation. Cycle such that past efforts bear fruit, past contacts pay off, potential is within view. Yes, you have right to be confident, optimistic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on the occult, mystery, hidden values, physical responses, psychic reactions. Avoid brooding. See situations, persons as they exist. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Some expectations could be shattered — but other areas will be reinforced. One close to you has money surprise.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Obtain hint from Gemini message; dig deep for information. Protect ideas, get legal aid where patents, copyrights are concerned. Your position is strong — stand your ground. Ride with tide — circumstances take strange twist.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish what you start, re-establish contacts. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Stick to basic issues — maintain moderate, steady pace. Spotlight on employment, diet, resolutions concerning health. In matters of speculation, stick to number 9.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Element of timing is on your side. Personal magnetism much in evidence. Change, travel, variety figure prominently. Member of opposite sex is drawn to you and apparently doesn't care who knows. Express in your own manner, style.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on home base, stepping stones, building on solid structure, being able to discern what is real, what is product of wishful thinking. Rise above office politics. Teach and learn. Give full play to intuitive intellect. Means follow through on hunches.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): movement, travel, relatives, messages and visits are part of cycle, leave details for another time. Grasp overall view. You have ability now to gain insight into your own future. It is bright and today you can "help it along."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spotlight on money, personal possessions, making the most of material at hand. You're able to break through, to remove restrictions. An exciting person comes into your life. Where there was despair, there now is anticipation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Popularity increases; you come back from adverse period. Gemini, Virgo, Libra figure prominently. Stick to number 5. Emphasis on initiative, appearance, panache. Young person says, "You have it all together!"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pace slows — avoid panic. Delay will work in your favor. Be aware of element of deception. Check sources. Take nothing for granted. Utilize "nose for news." You are due to make discovery which throws light on area of confusion, fear. Enlightenment is featured.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Aura of romance present — evaluate needs, deficits, assets, aspirations. Another Pisces and a Virgo could figure prominently. A wish is fulfilled. You can have good fortune if you don't chase it away.

IF FEBRUARY 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are unorthodox — you attract unusual circumstances and friends. You were on your own early, you do not fit into any specific pattern. You were different from members of your family and could have been separated from one or both parents. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. April will be your most significant month of 1978.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

Bill had just finished digging his new drainage trench when Ann came out into the garden. "You should have finished long ago with Ron helping," she said. "Didn't he come?"

"Sure, and we started digging together. But he had to leave after one hour, so I went on alone at the same speed for a further 50 minutes," her husband replied. "It would have taken 30 minutes less to do the job if he had stayed on."

How long would Bill have taken to do the job alone?

Thanks for idea to A. G. Alston, Geldeston, England.

Skinny . . . Bald . . . and 30, Buerkle Hottest Miler Indoors

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirty years old, completely bald as the result of a childhood disease and an obscure, frustrated distance runner in the last two Olympics, Dick Buerkle suddenly has become the hottest article in years as a record-setting miler on the indoor track circuit.

DICK BUERKLE
. . . indoor record holder

With his go-get-'em style, he has resurrected memories of the great Gil Dodds of the 1940s. He is captivating track and TV audiences.

He'll be doing it again Saturday night in the 1,500-metre feature of the United States Olympic Invitational track and field meet at Madison Square Garden.

Buerkle's emergence from track and field shadows to the role of standout miler is one of the most intriguing developments in sports.

As a high schooler in Rochester, N.Y., his best mile was four minutes 28 seconds. He tried out for the Villanova University track team without a scholarship and the coach refused to clock him in the quarter-mile because he was so slow. He drifted into the longer distances.

Buerkle (pronounced Berkley) failed to make the U.S. Olympic team in 1972. Although he dueled with such renowned distance runners as the late Steve Prefontaine and Marty Liquori in the ensuing years, occasionally beating both, he continued a career of virtual anonimity.

In the spring of 1975, he was a member of the U.S. team that went to China. He won the 5,000 metres at Canton, the 1,500 at Shanghai and the 10,000 at Peking.

Returning home, Buerkle qualified for the U.S. Olympic team in 1976 but developed breathing problems at Montreal and lost out in the trial heats. Discouraged, he took most of 1977 off.

"Usually," Buerkle said, "a runner progresses from the shorter to the longer distances. I decided to go the other way."

On Jan. 13 at College Park, Md., Buerkle set the world indoor record for the mile in 3:54.8, leaving Filbert Bayi in his wake. Last week he won the Wanamaker Mile in the Millrose Games at the Garden, again beating Bayi. Three times this winter he has finished ahead of the Tanzanian who holds the world outdoor record in the 1,500.

Buerkle is an implausible hero. At 130 pounds, he is thin as a match stick. His bald head glistens like a billiard ball. A Charlie Chaplin mustache enhances his unique facade.

Snowbound most of the winter, he uses a CB radio—a Christmas gift from his wife—to seek out clear roads for training. He devours peanut butter by the spoonfuls. He writes poetry for relaxation.

"I have no particular Olympic ambitions at the moment," he says. "I just want to run. The Olympics discourages me. I don't see why we have to change coaches every year, why we can't carry them over from Olympics to Olympics. And the equipment they give us is God-awful. At Montreal, our insignias were glued on our uniforms. New Guinea had better uniforms than we did. I felt like a jerk."

Drayton Selected Athlete of Year

REGINA — Distance runner Jerome Drayton of Toronto, winner of the Boston Marathon in 1977, has been named Canada's top male amateur athlete of the year by the Sports Federation of Canada.

Top female athletes were trap-shooter Susan Nattrass of Edmonton and speedskater Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg.

Tear-Gas Raid On 200 Strikers Rescues 7 Working Coal Miners

OAKMAN, Ala. (AP) — Alabama state troopers tear-gassed 150 to 200 striking miners early today and rescued seven non-union miners trapped at a small strip-mine near Oakman in Walker County, a trooper spokesman said.

Lieut. Roy Smith said several troopers suffered cuts and bruises when the striking miners threw rocks and sticks at them when they moved in shortly after midnight. He said several shots were fired and dynamite sticks thrown, but no policemen were injured.

The seven non-union miners were rescued unharmed, but Smith said he did not know if any of the strikers were injured.

Smith said the striking miners had told the mine owner in the presence of a state trooper Thursday that the non-union miners would not be allowed to leave the mine area alive.

"Our mission here was to protect lives and property," Smith said. "The lives of these seven men were in serious jeopardy and we took what action was necessary to get them out."

Three teams of troopers were dispatched to the Oakman area accompanied by three tactical teams, a helicopter equipped with a high-powered night light and two National Guard helicopters, Smith said.

He would not say how many troopers were involved in the operation.

"Our first thought was to go in with helicopters and bring the people out, but after a survey of the area we found that the helicopters could not land," Smith said.

He said tear gas was used on the strikers after they refused to disperse and "became very abusive and started throwing rocks, sticks and anything they could get their hands on.

"After tear gas was administered, troopers came under small arms fire, and sticks, rocks and firebrands from the bonfires were thrown at us," Smith said.

He said two sticks of dynamite thrown from a house in the area exploded near a group of troopers, but injured no one. Another stick was thrown under a patrol car containing two troopers, but did not explode.

"The state trooper helicopter flying the night light came under heavy ground fire," said Smith.

After dispersing the strikers, the troopers rescued the seven miners trapped in a house adjacent to the mine.

"Their vehicle had been firebombed" by the striking miners, he said.

Parents Lose Laetrile Bid

ATLANTA (AP) — A teen-age girl suffering from cancer has been placed in state custody for treatment because her parents wanted her treated only with Laetrile, the head of the Georgia human resources department has confirmed.

"I consider children with cancer whose parents have rejected conventional treatment in favor of Laetrile to be deprived. At least one Georgia juvenile court has agreed with me," department commissioner W. Douglas Skelton said Thursday.

Dr. Skelton was referring to a juvenile court's previously unpublicized action last December putting the girl in the state's care. He said he personally made the decision to proceed with court action after the case was brought to the department's attention by the girl's doctor.

Skelton mentioned the girl's case during testimony before a legislative committee Wednesday and elaborated on it Thursday in an interview.

The girl, whom Skelton declined to identify, has been diagnosed as suffering from Hodgkin's disease, cancer of the lymph glands.

Hodgkin's disease, cancer experts say, is almost certainly fatal if left untreated. However, they say 95 per cent of the cases are cured if radiation treatment is begun in the disease's early stages.

Laetrile, a controversial substance extracted from apricot pits, is claimed by supporters as an effective cancer treatment, but organized medicine and the U.S. government condemn its use as worthless quackery.

U.S. Downplays Tie With China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has shelved its goal of establishing diplomatic relations with China against the wishes of the top U.S. envoy in Peking, Leonard Woodcock, state department officials say.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said that promoting relations with China now could alienate many members of Congress whose support will be needed for other foreign policy issues the Carter administration feels deserve higher priority.

Any move that would threaten the security of Taiwan also could work to the advantage of Republicans in the November congressional elections, the officials said.

Thus, some officials believe the China question will be deferred at least until 1979. Others see little prospect for any move to recognize China during President Carter's first term.

The main obstacle to an exchange of ambassadors with Peking is the continuing U.S. diplomatic and defence ties with Taiwan.

Alluding to that problem, Woodcock said the absence of relations with China was "founded on an obvious absurdity," adding that he would be "delighted" if the United States were to sever its ties with Taiwan.

Woodcock's plain-spoken remarks took the administration by surprise. One official said the remarks were of a kind usually reserved for private cables.

State department spokesman John Trattner, while not disavowing Woodcock's statements, said Thursday they were spontaneous and not cleared in advance.

Such candor is unusual for an official involved in a sensitive diplomatic post. Officials said that Woodcock was a newcomer to diplomacy and feels secure in his job because of his friendship with Carter.

Adultery Passed

MADRID (AFP) — The Spanish Chamber of Deputies voted Wednesday to make adultery and keeping mistresses no longer a criminal offence by 254 votes to four, with two abstentions. The bill will be debated by the Senate.

Fluoride Poison Levels Extreme

An Alcan Smelters and Chemical Ltd. report on possible fluoride poisoning of Kitimat Valley forest in northwestern B.C. says all plots tested contain damage and that damage levels in some cases are extreme.

The report, dated December, 1977, says similarities with other findings "suggest most of the damage could be related to the effects to fluoride."

Fluorides are a byproduct of the manufacture of aluminum and are one of the most toxic of air pollutants to plants, a spokesman at the federal Pacific Forest Research Centre in Saanich said Thursday.

Hydrogen fluoride combined with water inside plants forms poisonous hydro-fluoric acid, said the spokesman.

Results of the report were compiled by University of B.C. forestry professor Peter Murtha for Reid Collins and Associates, a consulting company hired by Alcan.

The results were obtained from infra-red aerial photographs of 48 separate test plots in about 62,000 acres of Kitimat Valley forest.

A map accompanying the Murtha report indicates that the damaged plots follow a south-north direction up the Kitimat Valley.

Alcan officials testified last month at a Pollution Board Control hearing here that a chemical cloud known as the fume path, travels in a north-to-south direction up the Kitimat Valley and is carried by prevailing winds.

Damaged plots were in the vicinity of the Alcan smelter, the Eurocan Pulp and Paper mill, the town of Kitimat, and as far away as 15 kilometres from the town.

Murtha's infra-red photographic analysis of tree damage with special reference to any damage specifically caused by fluoride, was ordered by the provincial PCB as a condition of Alcan's 1972 Pollution Control permit.

Murtha said he cannot discuss the report without getting clearance from Alcan. He also said he cannot conclude from the report that tree damage was definitely caused by fluoride.

Hefty Hydro Rate Boost For Industry

B.C. Hydro has announced an increase of 8.1 per cent in rates for large industrial customers including sawmills, mines and cement plants.

The rate increase will average 18.8 per cent for bulk users, such as pulp and paper companies and electro-chemical firms, said a B.C. Hydro spokesman.

The rates will increase 12.5 per cent April 1, 1979, and 22 per cent April 1 1980, for 50 large industrial customers, said the spokesman.

The general rate increase announced last week, which includes residential customers, was an average of 17.7 per cent effective Mar. 1.

Five-Year Penitentiary Term For James Bay Inn Robbery

A 29-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court Thursday to five years in the penitentiary for armed robbery of $114.70 at the James Bay Inn Sept. 1.

Edward King Krobel was found guilty by a jury after two hours deliberation following a four-day trial.

Judge J.J. Anderson pointed to Krobel's criminal record which includes several assaults, breaking and entering and theft.

The offence was committed late at night and a knife was used to threaten a hotel employee.

"The last of my considerations is the question of his rehabilitation. At his age and experience, this is something that lies with him." Judge Anderson said.

Two men entered the Government Street hotel about 4.30 a.m. with toques masking their faces. One produced a knife while the other cleaned out the cash drawer. Night clerk Walter Scott said he was ordered to lie on the floor and stay there or he would be killed."

Defence counsel Douglas Christie told Anderson that Krobel only wanted to maintain his innocence but a little later he suggested that the sentence should not be so long as to offer him nothing but a prison life.

Pitfalls of Condominium Living

By LYNNE GORDON

CONDOMINIUMS. You hear and read a lot about them today. They're one of the hottest areas of alternate housing in Canada. A dozen years ago, they were just a glimmer in the eye of a developer. Suddenly, they began to spring up all over — mostly in Ontario but increasingly in British Columbia, Quebec and other provinces. Why are they so popular — or are they just well advertised?

Inflated land values in cities like Vancouver, Toronto and St. John's have pushed the price of a traditional family home beyond the means of most people and rents continue to soar. But people need a place to live and the "home-of-your-own" concept is ingrained in most Canadians. Because municipalities allow a greater density for condominiums than for private houses, and because condominiums are not subject to rent controls, it looked as if condominium development would make money for the developers and satisfy the public's need for home ownership.

But things have not gone so smoothly for either the developers or the purchasers. The housing market seems glutted with condominiums. At the beginning of this year, for example, more than half of the unsold homes in Toronto were condominium units. Why? Well, for one thing, Canada's urban housing crisis created a condominium bandwagon. But that was 10 years ago and today the economy is weak, money is tight and there has been a backlash against condominiums because of unfavorable publicity.

Many people were uninformed when they bought their condominium. After moving into their new home, they were rudely surprised by costs they hadn't figured on . . . especially those common expenses required to maintain a shared building such as heat, lighting, cleaning of the building and servicing of elevators. An executive of one condominium association estimated that 25 per cent of condominium owners are financially unsuited for condominium living. In Europe, condominium living was for the rich — those who disliked property maintenance and could afford to pay somebody else to do it. In Canada, many who should be doing their own maintenance are paying the high cost of professional management and maintenance even though they can't afford it. How did they get into this bind?

Developers make condominium living very attractive, burying the up-keep costs or under-estimating the real future costs. Since energy costs are figured by a developer two to three years before a condominium is registered, actual costs may turn out to be much higher, especially in this period of rapid inflation. Also, highrise condominiums are bulk metered so in order to cut down on energy costs there must be a collective effort by each and every unit in the building.

For many lower income people, condominiums have become the only kind of housing they can afford. Some governments, such as Ontario's, are promoting this kind of affordable housing with incentive grants or deferred payments which make it easier to buy a condominium initially but which do not help to pay for the unit in the long run. People are usually prepared to meet their mortgage payments but they may not be able to handle unpredictable maintenance costs. If you are financially solvent, added costs can be taken in stride. But if, like most people today, you are living from hand to mouth, an extra 35 dollars per month may be too much to cope with. In one condominium, the maintenance costs went up 50 per cent this year. And what happens if you can't afford to pay your share of the common expenses? In some provinces, like Ontario, the condominium corporation can evict you from the project, foreclose on your mortgage and take over your unit.

Condominium owners pay taxes on the same basis as single-family residences but don't receive the same municipal services. Condominium projects are private property and the condominium corporation must look after its own roads, supply its own snow and garbage removal services and light the outside property. They operate like mini-municipalities.

Condominium living may be just for you. But owning a condominium is a complicatd business — legally, socially and financially. Don't be so anxious to own your own home that you jump into a condominium purchase without taking a careful look at the responsibilities and unforeseen costs.

Is it definitely known that Tris can cause cancer in children? Aren't we exposing our children to the greater hazard of fire by eliminating this substance from their clothing? — Mrs. D.I.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

The chemical compound, dibro-mo-propyl phosphate, known as "Tris", is definitely of value in retarding flames when used in children's clothing.

A two-year study made at the National Cancer Institute showed that this chemical did cause cancer in experimental rats and mice. Product Safety Commission has banned its use in children's clothing.

Some research scientists believe that the preliminary studies in these experimental animals were far removed from the realistic possibility of producing cancer in children.

A great many parents like yourself have rightfully expressed concern. You wonder if the theoretic risk to the use of Tris is as great as the actual risk of injury, and even death, to children whose clothing will no longer be flame-resistant. It is generally acknowledged that Tris as a flame-retardant has saved an enormous number of children from serious burns.

I have begun to have hot flashes with the onset of my menopause. Since all of my friends are in the same age group, we think of ourselves as the "Menopause Club." I'm absolutely confused by the variety of opinions of the members of this "club" who quote their doctors about the dangers of using the hormone pill. Is there any other way to control these hot flashes? — Mrs. G.M.I., Wash.

Dear Mrs. I.:

Honorable members of the "Menopause Club" are rightfully confused by the contradictory information that has been bombarding them in recent years.

The fact is that the use of estrogen, the hormone pill you refer to, has been widely prescribed by a great many gynecologist. There are others who have not so readily accepted the use of estrogen for all cases of menopausal hot flashes.

But definitely accepted is the fact that every person must be individually evaluated before such treatment is begun. And after it has been started, constant supervision by the doctor is essential so as to reduce the possibility of complications.

Now, a group of physicians are treating menopausal patients with another hormone, "progesterone." You might ask your doctor if you are a candidate for its use.

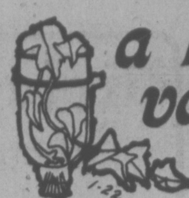
. . . it tells you how



a hanging vase

Looking for an inexpensive — yet original — pot for a favorite hanging plant? You can create a very neat and attractive vase by recycling a colored bottle.

Cut the bottom off of your chosen container at the desired height, then close the opening at the neck with a cork. Wind a length of wire around the tapered part of the glass, extend it up the bottle's side, and wrap it again around the planter's "body" ending in a loop.

Rectangular-shaped decanters fitted with these hangers can be placed in interesting arrangements directly against a wall. Round ones, on the other hand, go nicely in a corner.

Silent Treatment Is Cruel Abuse

DEAR ABBY: I beg you to publish this because I want to know if other readers have the same problem, and most of all what they do about it.

My husband will stop speaking to me for weeks at a time, for no reason at all. Right now he's been silent for three weeks, and it usually goes on for five. Otherwise he's the greatest guy on earth. Not perfect, but great.

He suddenly takes a mind to clam up (about twice a year) and it gets very lonely. My nerves almost go to pieces before he talks again.

I think it's a childish habit his mother let him get away with when he was little. What do you think? Is there a cure? — LONELY

DEAR LONELY: I didn't need a calculator to figure out that your husband gives you the silent treatment for 10 weeks out of 52, which is a lot of silence. He is punishing you, which is cruel and abusive. Insist that he get professional counselling. Abuse comes in a variety of forms. Silence can be as cruel as physical abuse.

DEAR ABBY: My roommate met a dude at a dance and she really dug him. (I'll call him "Worm.")

Worm gave my roommate a big rush, but she continued dating others because she thinks the way to keep a guy interested is to make him a little jealous. Worm also dates more than one girl at a time for the same reasons.

One night when my roommate was busy, Worm asked me out and I went. He then asked me for another date, which I accepted because by this time I was beginning to really like him.

Then Worm dated my roommate again. I know she likes him, but so do I.

My question: Do you think Worm is dating my roommate again to make me jealous? Or is he dating ME to make her jealous?

And should I date him again if he asks me? — AIRES

DEAR AIRES: Don't date a guy if you suspect he is using you to make another girl jealous. And a girl who really digs a dude but dates others just to make HIM jealous is a bit of a worm herself (an angle worm).

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for advising parents to believe their children to be innocent until proven guilty. I wish I had read that years ago.

When my sons were younger they were accused by a neighbor of a serious misdeed. Although my sons denied it up and down, this neighbor was sure, so I punished the boys severely by not allowing them to go to the country fair.

About a week after the fair, this neighbor called to say that he was "sorry" — he had made a mistake, and my boys were not the guilty parties.

It was too late to take my heartbroken boys to the fair, but you can bet, Abby, ever since that time I have believed them to be innocent until proven guilty. And I've never regretted it, either.

After Divorce, What's Left for Grandparents?

By GEORGIA DULLEA
New York Times

Ever since the divorce, the Christmas presents addressed to their grandson have been returned, unopened, by their former daughter-in-law. Now, three years later, the grandfather was talking of ending "this pitiful ritual," but the grandmother would not hear of it.

"I am going to send a present to Billy," she told him. "You know we always send a present."

Reflexively, her fingers touched the gold locket that held the grandson's baby picture. "At least she can't say we don't care about Billy," the grandmother said.

The grandfather turned and stared out the window at the Connecticut countryside. "No," he said at last, "she cannot say we don't care."

Holidays are painful times for such couples. Divorce has robbed them of their roles as grandparents, it seems without even giving them a day in court. Not all grandparents are resigned to this loss, however.

In small but growing numbers, grandparents are beginning to press for visitation rights to the children of divorce. They are seeking help from family counselling agencies. They are sharing stories with other grandparents in self-help groups such as Grandparents Anonymous.

Not surprisingly, most of the action is coming from paternal grandparents. Parents of sons are far more likely to lose contact with grandchildren as a result of divorce, since child custody goes to the mother in roughly nine in every 10 cases.

Maternal grandparents, on the other hand, sometimes complain of the opposite problem. The divorced daughter takes a job to help support the family, leaving the older generation to babysit. Still, for all their grandmotherly grumbling about seeing too much of the children, few would trade places with those for whom a grandchild is only a picture in a locket.

Situations like this are inevitable, perhaps, in an age when one in every three first marriages ends in divorce, when so-called serial marriage has become almost fashionable.

Generally, according to family counsellors, it is the daughter-in-law who severs the ties with the grandparents. She may be punishing them for the sins of the son. Or she may believe, rightly or wrongly, that they have contributed to the marital split. Or she may have found a new life — and a new husband — for her children. Why prolong old and awkward relationships?

In another, less-frequent pattern, the divorced son breaks his link with the children and hence his parents' link. He, too, may remarry, become a father again or a stepfather. Unless the children of his first marriage live nearby, their lives may drift farther and farther apart.

Whatever the case, grandparents who find themselves outside the family circle are turning to professionals, often for the first time in their lives.

"Remember, this generation wasn't brought up on the idea that counselling is great stuff," Lois Glasser was saying the other day. "These are kind of daring, brave people we're seeing. They are in a great deal of pain."

Mrs. Glasser, who teaches at the University of Michigan's Schools of Social Work and Public Health, also has a private practice in Ann Arbor. Over the last year or so, she said, she has counselled 20 grandparent couples, written letters and made phone calls for those too timid to take the initial step and worked out reconciliations and even contracts on visitation rights between the parties.

"I always focus on the children," she explained. "When kids are involved in a divorce you're dealing with a lot of guilt. In a way, counsellors play on that guilt. I tell them, 'If you can't work this out, if this rigid behavior continues, who's being deprived of what?' Obviously, the kids. Frequently, the daughter-in-law will buy into this because she wants to be as right as she can be."

To be sure, she conceded, some daughters-in-law will never relent. In four of the 16 cases, the mothers attributed the marital splits to the in-laws' meddling. "The counselling way is out," Mrs. Glasser told a group of grandparents recently. "If you want to try the legal way, that's your business."

But do grandparents have any rights in the eyes of the law? They do in a number of states that have recently enacted so-called grandparents' rights statutes concerning visitation. Among them are New York, California and Arkansas.

OKAY, OPEN THE DOORS and let me rip, two-year-old Stuart Nesbitt of Ottawa appears to be saying as he tries out an $18,000 tractor at the Canadian Farm Show this week. About 350 exhibits are on display at the show, which finishes today.

Although the 12-page pamphlet How to Conserve Energy and Protect Joints is specifically written for patients with rheumatoid arthritis, many people with other disorders can also benefit from it.

One important step to save your energy is to plan your time and the tasks you have to tackle. If you make a weekly timetable, first jot down the tasks you have to perform. As you fill in your timetable, eliminate any unnecessary job and try to alternate between heavy and light work, and between sitting and standing. Plan several rest periods throughout the day as these will minimize fatigue. According to the brochure, total rest, stretched out on a bed or sofa, is better than just relaxing in a chair. Also, whenever you can, work sitting down. You will use 25 per cent less energy if you sit rather than stand.

The brochure also recommends that you keep items you often need within easy reach, not to carry heavy loads, to buy easy-care clothes and to practice good posture.

In addition, you will learn how to protect your joints. For instance, walk only as far as you comfortably can. Strengthen the muscles around your joints by a planned exercise program and don't put on weight. If you feel pain during an activity, stop as soon as you can. If after any activity you have an unpleasant feeling for more than two hours, you probably overdid it.

Shanghaied, Says Merchant Seaman

OTTAWA (CP) — David Hume McGarvie, a Canadian merchant seaman, says he was conscripted into some of the trappings of foreign military service by a Canadian Crown corporation.

McGarvie, 50, a veteran seaman from Vancouver, said in an interview he went to work last summer for Northern Transportation Co. Ltd. (NTCL) aboard an oil tanker in the Arctic and discovered he was aboard a United States military vessel—which was flying the Canadian flag.

The M. V. Pinnebog, based at Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., has been leased for a number of years by NTCL to deliver fuel to DEW Line (distant early warning) military installations on the Arctic coast and Arctic islands. The crews have been employees of federally-owned NTCL, which provides transport services in the far North.

A stamp in McGarvie's seamen's discharge book shows clearly he served aboard a United States Air Force vessel. He said he was concerned he could be charged with espionage if the ship drifted into Soviet waters, and he could face problems in future if he serves aboard a vessel calling on a port of a country hostile to the United States.

"They could put me up against the wall and shoot me," he said dramatically in his Scottish burr. He said the vessel has no registration number, "which makes it all the more sinister."

McGarvie and fellow Vancouver seaman Marko Makar, 42, also are angry at Canadian Pacific Ltd., which they say required them to make U.S. social security payments and to contribute to the U.S. railway retirement fund while serving in 1973 aboard the Princess Marguerite, a Canadian-registered passenger vessel operating between Victoria and Seattle.

McGarvie said he and Makar spent several days in Ottawa last week fighting what they said are injustices committed against Canadian seamen.

The Marguerite, then operated by B.C. Coast Steamships, a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, was acquired late by the British Columbia government and since then crew members haven't been required to pay the U.S. contributions.

The two seamen said Canadian Pacific has been transferring a portion of wages to the United States since 1932.

Roman Gralewicz, Canadian president of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU), said in a telephone interview from Montreal he knows of no other shipping company that does this.

Paper Backdated, Trial Told

A document produced in county court and signed by two men standing trial was backdated 19 months from the time it was actually signed, one of them testified Thursday.

Richard Brian Higgins, 42, of Saanich was giving evidence in the 11th day of a trial in which he and William Alfred Eastgate, 43, of Central Saanich, a land developer, are accused of conspiracy to obstruct justice and corruptly agreeing to accept or offering a secret commission.

Higgins, president of Unity Bank of Canada from 1972 to 1975, said Eastgate asked him in December, 1974, if he was interested in working for the Seaboard group of companies, in which Eastgate had an interest, and he replied he was interested in any offer.

Higgins said he was in Eastgate's office when Eastgate wrote out the document, signed it and asked him to sign it. He said Eastgate told him it was a document he wished to use to ensure a tax saving on income from one of his companies and with this income he could provide a bonus in the future if Higgins accepted the employment offer.

"I asked him why it was backdated and he said for tax purposes," said Higgins, who then signed it.

The document, dated May 16, 1973, refers to sharing 50-50 in profits or losses in a land development of W.A.E. Holdings Ltd. and Seaboard on Doney Road, in Central Saanich, in which W.A.E. had a 50 per cent interest.

Crown counsel Mike Hutchison asked Higgins if he was concerned that the backdating might be a tax conspiracy.

Higgins said he trusted Eastgate and assumed it would be taken to Eastgate's lawyer to clear it.

When Hutchison suggested the document was in fact signed in May, 1973, and not in December, 1974, Higgins replied "you are wrong. It was signed between Dec. 18 and 22, 1974."

Higgins told the court earlier he authorized a line of credit for Seaboard Enterprises Ltd. on May 15, 1973, for $425,000 while visiting Victoria and after checking the balance sheet and subdivision plans of the company and satisfying himself that the company was not controlled by Eastgate.

He earlier authorized a personal line of credit to Eastgate of $250,000, in January, 1973.

Higgins and Eastgate are jointly accused of conspiracy to obstruct justice between April 26 and April 30, 1977, by destroying and altering documentary evidence "thereby attempting to conceal the offences of giving and receiving, corruptly, benefits to an agent" contrary to the secret commission section of the Criminal Code.

Higgins is accused of corruptly agreeing, between Jan. 1, 1973, and April 30, 1977, to accept from Eastgate and W.A.E. Holdings Ltd. a benefit, specifically an opportunity to participate and share, without personal investment or efforts, in the business ventures of Seaboard Enterprises Ltd. and W.A.E. Holdings Ltd. which resulted in a profit of $110,000 as consideration for showing favor to Seaboard and W.A.E. Holdings regarding their credit applications to Unity Bank.

Eastgate is accused of corruptly offering this benefit to Higgins as consideration for Higgins showing favor to Seaboard and W.A.E. Holdings regarding their credit applications to Unity Bank.

Unity Bank, formed in 1972, was absorbed into Provincial Bank of Canada last year.

Hutchison referred to minutes from the bank which said all loans over $75,000 were to be reported to the board. But Higgins said this was simply a list compiled by a secretary in the credit department and it was "possible" things were missing.

The loan to Eastgate was not mentioned in the list and Higgins agreed he had already authorized it.

He agreed he was the only bank official who met Eastgate in May, 1973, when financing was being finalized for Seaboard's subdivision plans.

He denied accepting everything that Eastgate told him, saying he looked at the land and checked the balance sheet and Eastgate's "reputation and honesty were well known in banking circles."

Referred to a letter he wrote Eastgate in September, 1974, asking that his share ownership be placed in his wife's name, Higgins said he and his wife were separating and she thought the company existed but he had never sent the $20,000 discussed to be put into the company.

Higgins said his directors asked for his resignation and he gave it in November, 1975, because he had always worked on the basis that if he didn't produce results he would leave. He said adverse publicity was part of the reason but the general manager had under-estimated loan losses and reporting procedures from the branches had been misleading the credit department.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 46-year-old woman who spat on a city hall cashier Oct. 18 was convicted in Victoria provincial court Thursday of assault.

Judge William Ostler found Sok Ching Lowe, 569 Sumas, guilty of the offence but gave her a conditional discharge and ordered her not to enter that portion of city hall where cashier Lorraine Tutte works. He said if Mrs. Lowe receives any parking tickets during her six months probation, someone else will have to pay them for her.

In addition, the judge ordered the woman within 10 days to write a categorical and unconditional letter of apology to Mrs. Tutte.

Ostler sympathized with city hall cashiers, stating that their duties are sometimes unpleasant and that indignant customers are "occupational hazards."

He ruled that Mrs. Tutte attempted to be conciliatory and polite to Mrs. Lowe and that the act of spitting was a "disgusting and revolting act." While the offence may appear to be superficially a trifling assault, he said it was a grievous insult to all cultures to be spat upon.

"These young women (cashiers) must be treated with a certain amount of respect," Ostler said.

The incident occurred at about 9 a.m. when Mrs. Lowe, who received a parking ticket the previous night while attending night school, went to pay the $10 fine.

According to Mrs. Tutte's testimony, the woman put the ticket on the counter, started going through her purse, began speaking loudly in Chinese mostly, put $10 on the counter and began shaking her fist and talking loudly at Mrs. Tutte. The woman then turned around, took two steps and then reversed directions, came towards Mrs. Tutte and spat at her.

Mrs. Lowe's testimony, through interpreter Peter Wong, was that some of her breakfast became lodged in a hole in her teeth and she spat it out with no intention of expectorating on anyone.

In his application for an unconditional or conditional discharge, defence lawyer Richard Stewart said his client had already suffered a great deal of embarrassment from publicity at the time of the incident. He said that in the case of Mrs. Lowe, the public interest had been served.

A Wilkinson Road jail inmate was charged with assaulting a corrections officer Jan. 10 and was remanded until next Thursday for election of his trial method.

Maurice Damis Demontigny, 18, appeared before Judge Harold Alder and was charged with assaulting a peace officer, possession of a weapon (knife), and carrying a concealed weapon. The attack is alleged to be against Rudolph Zicky, a guard at the prison.

Alder handed out a suspended sentence to 19-year-old Steven Douglas McIlwaine but ordered him to perform 100 hours of community service work.

McIlwaine pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage and crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court McIlwaine was driving a pickup truck Jan. 17 which came to a barricade in Goldstream Park. Mulligan said McIlwaine moved a number of rocks and then drove up an embankment, causing about $300 damage.

Alder placed McIlwaine on six months probation and said he would recommend some of the service work be done fixing up the damage he caused in the park.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Robert Alan Pepler, 24, of 273 West Burnside, $500; and Jeffrey Wayne Carder, 19, of 639 Constance, $350.

SCHOOL DISTRICT
No. 71
(Courtenay)
REQUIRES
1-Assistant Principal
3-House Coordinators

New Secondary school in Comox, B.C., based on the concept of SCHOOLS-WITHIN-A-SCHOOL and TEACHER-ADVISOR systems, requires an innovative "administrative-counselling" team. The school will be divided into three houses, an enrolment of 470 pupils in grades 10 and 11. In its second year the school will have 700 pupils in grades 10-12.
The ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL will have deputy principal responsibilities and will share with the HOUSE CO-ORDINATORS administrative, counselling and department head duties. The team will be expected to carry a teaching load of approximately 40 per cent each and provide leadership on both a house and school basis.
BASIC QUALIFICATIONS are a B.C. Professional Teaching Certificate, successful teaching experience, and demonstrated leadership ability.
Remuneration involves placement on the salary scale plus an allowance as follows:
Assistant Principal — $4500
House Co-ordinator — $2900
Applications supported by appropriate documentation should be received by February 15, 1978. Selected applicants will be interviewed in Courtenay.
Further information may be obtained from the Principal, Mr. S. Heal (338-5383). Applicants should be directed to:

GARDENING

Greenery Is Good Health

Courtyard gardens will become a necessity in downtown areas of Victoria as more buildings rise to greater heights and take up more space.

Have you wondered why you "feel good" walking in a park or woodland when living and working in a city atmosphere all week? Green foliage, ecologists have been telling us, gives off oxygen which makes it easier for us to breathe and so we feel relaxed.

Fortunately, landscapers with half a lifetime of local experience in plant material and its needs will be able to advise, plan and plant so that at least token amounts of oxygen will be available while, at the same time, something of the coastal character of the city remains.

It isn't enough to rely on Douglas Street with its fine City of Victoria flower baskets and curbside planters. Plots of soil in angles of buildings and in areas as small as 10 by 15 feet behind the buildings must be created for plantings of permanent beauty and utility for those who live and work nearby.

Other cities dealt with the problem years ago but so far we have seen little thought given to a similar problem here. We feel a sense of numbing shock on finding another familiar landmark gone, but apart from regretting the loss of its familiarity we seldom give much thought to wondering whether the new building will allow for trees and shrubs in the ground level design.

The City of London was aware of the need for providing green areas amid the smoke-producing coal industrializing in the 19th century. Today the little parks and open spaces offer comparative easy-breathing in a city known for its fog and dense atmosphere.

A similar situation descended on Los Angeles, which until the 1940's had only a handful of buildings over two stories high because of frequent earthquake tremors. The city and neighboring Hollywood was known for its clear air. Now, tree planted malls and small parks have become necessary as much to give citizens a breathing space as for the resulting restfulness and uplift of the greenery.

New York City landscapers early in this century saw the need for allowing narrow pieces of ground to remain between tall buildings already rising in the city center. Plots that appeared no more than 10 or 15 feet wide and perhaps 25 or 30 feet long could be seen attractively planned to give resident owners a quiet spot.

In New York, as in Toronto today, many business people were not commuters in those earlier days, but lived most of the year in the luxurious town houses of the era.

In Victoria, planners and landscape men have plenty of information to draw on. They know the function of tree and shrub foliage in purifying the air of noxious fumes that in time affect every citizen's health, and they can research the kinds of plant material most suited to the small spaces between and around the buildings they plan to erect.

It will be gratifying if planners pause during the initial stages to be sure that adequate plantings will be made to provide at least a measure of relief to the confining and devitalizing situations being designed now on their drawing boards.

This has to be it for the discerning family to enjoy the amenities of nearness to everything for the children and seclusion as well. It's too unique to describe (you must see it). But, it does consist of three bedrooms, large kitchen, entertainment size living room, and bar opening to nice patio in secluded landscape property (just under half an acre). See you at 2677 Rainville Rd. in the popular Langford area.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep gratitude for the much appreciated help and concern in the recent passing of our beloved husband, Dad and Grandad, Mr. Doug Smith. To Dr. S. Peterson and Dr. R. Raine for their attentiveness during his illness; to Dr. H. Richardson and the nurse who attended to Dad during his last moments. Also, the Saanich Police and all the staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital for their courtesy and dedication. To the Naval Fire Service, each and every man, our sincere appreciation for everything. Many thanks to Doug's "Old army buddies" for their years of friendship. Finally, to everyone for the many flowers, cards, beautiful letters and words of encouragement.
—Good bless you all.
—All the Smith Family.

I wish to thank all my friends and relatives for the donations, gifts of flowers and baking, and the support and sympathy extended to me during the illness and loss of my late husband, Albert R. Cheffins. Thanks also to Pastor R. C. Nelson for his friendly support.

309 IN MEMORIAM

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD. call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, well-trained ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. Remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday: 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

TARIFF BOARD INQUIRY — REFERENCE NO. 156
ANTIQUES, COLLECTIBLES AND HOBBY EQUIPMENT

The Minister of Finance has directed the Tariff Board to conduct an inquiry into the provisions of the Customs Tariff relating to:

1. Antiques and other articles more than 50 years old;
2. Collectibles not covered by the above category, and
3. Hobby equipment, excluding sports equipment.

The Board has been asked to consider whether special tariff provisions should apply to the aforementioned categories of goods and, where applicable, to recommend appropriate tariff descriptions and rates of duty.

The Board hopes to begin its public hearings in May, 1978. In the meantime, it wishes to receive suggestions on the scope and definition of the principal areas of investigation and with regard to the structure and agenda of the public hearings.

Organizations or individuals having views on these matters, or wishing to be kept informed, are invited to notify the Board as soon as possible. Those responding will receive copies of background material being prepared by the Board; they will also be duly notified of the arrangements proposed with regard to the public hearings. At the time of such notification, the Board will invite the submission of formal representations or briefs.

All communications to the Board should indicate Reference No. 156 and be addressed to:

Race Riot Warning Issued in Toronto

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Race riots may occur in Toronto unless racial tension in that city is reduced, says Wilson Head, chairman of the Urban Alliance of Race Relations.

The situation has worsened in recent years with an increase in non-white immigrants and high unemployment, he said in an interview Thursday.

"Look, when the East Indians organize a defence league, they're ready to fight fire with fire."

The alliance has about 135 white and non-white members working with education officials, the news media and police to increase public awareness of racial problems.

Head said earlier at a seminar at Wilfrid Laurier University that racism will continue unless changes are made in society's aggressive and competitive values that create class structures that led to racism.

Josephine Naidoo, psychology professor at Wilfrid Laurier, said Western societies must be willing to learn more about other cultures instead of expecting other cultures to conform to Western norms.

Transit Plea Pushed

Widening of the Old Island Highway through View Royal to three lanes and major improvements in public transportation serving the Western Community were requested in a brief submitted to the provincial cabinet in Saanich Thursday.

Another key recommendation in the brief, presented by the so-called joint transportation committee of Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and View Royal, is that B.C. Hydro incorporate into its network the responsibility for providing bus service to those areas.

The services are now operated by a separate provincially-owned company, Vancouver Island Transit Ltd.

The brief points out that the lack of interconnecting routes and transfer privileges between the two operators is a particular problem to senior citizens and students, who are denied access to many of the educational, health and recreational facilities of the region.

Widening the Old Island Highway, the committee said, would allow the centre lane to become an alternating one-way lane for inbound and outbound traffic during the morning and evening rush hours.

The brief describes the present bus services as "grossly inadequate," noting that there are only 10 buses from Victoria to Langford on weekdays and two on Sundays.

Mrs. Thelma Dawson, former chairman of the View Royal transportation committee, said later the last bus from downtown Victoria to Langford on a weekday leaves at 7.50 p.m., which means area residents cannot enjoy an evening show in town.

By contrast, she said, Oak Bay with a population of less than 18,000 is served by dozens of buses daily.

Optimism On VGH Future

Victoria Ald. Bob Wright came away from a meeting with the provincial cabinet Thursday cautiously optimistic about the future of Victoria General Hospital.

Wright, together with Mayor Mike Young, presented a brief to cabinet urging the proposed new Helmcken Road hospital be delayed two months and that Victoria General be retained as an acute-care hospital.

Wright said Health Minister Bob McClelland indicated there would be no delay in the Helmcken project but gave assurances that Victoria General is not going to be phased out.

Wright said the city feels the Helmcken site is an inappropriate location for an acute-care hospital but is not so strongly opposed to the project that they want to fight it out with the province.

"Our main thrust is for continuation of a hospital at the downtown site."

Steelhead Prospects Poor

Prospects for this season's steelhead run are as poor as last year — the worst on record, fish and wildlife branch studies indicate.

A low return forecast will affect the success of steelhead anglers in coastal B.C. and most of Washington.

Low ocean survival of winter steelhead this year and major floods in the late fall of 1975 are two factors blamed for the decline in returning fish.

The return of adult steelhead at Big Qualicum hatchery last year was two per cent of the smolts released and indications are the return will be about the same this year.

Hatcheries have reported returns as high as an 11 per cent in other years.

Hammer Blasted On Planner Loan

Regional chief planner Peter Hammer was rapped over the knuckles Thursday for sending a senior staff member to work on contract in Central Saanich after being told not to do so by executive director Dennis Young.

The Capital Regional District's community planning committee ruled such action can only be taken with the approval of both the committee and the regional board.

"We have been talking about needs and priorities and the basic clients for the community planning department are these five electoral areas," Young said. "Contractual services, if there are to be any, is something that has to be consciously authorized by the board."

Hammer said planner Jim Lowe was helping Central Saanich to complete its community plan at a cost of $3,700.

Young said previous budget instructions meant that Lowe would be on staff until the end of April and he felt Lowe's remaining time should be used to maximum advantage in the unorganized areas.

"If you have someone who has to go at the end of April his energies should go to the higher priorities," committee chairman Howard Drummond said.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton said he did not think Central Saanich had urgent problems and could await board decisions.

"As a matter of fact they have some very pressing decisions to make with regard to servicing," Hammer replied. "Our own engineering department is involved in servicing matters and they more or less implored us to help out in the interests of the region and this was certainly worthwhile to undertake."

He said the region would be losing a valuable, experienced planner in Lowe and Sooke director Charles Perkins suggested Lowe be put back in the budget.

Restaurateur $1M Winner

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nicola Berardi, a 39-year-old Vancouver restaurant owner, won $1 million in the Jan. 29 Provincial lottery, officials of the lottery said Thursday.

A group of 10 residents of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., also won a $1-million prize.

Also winning $100,000 in the January draw was Edward Daye, a retired CPR employee from Lombardi, Ont.

The next Provincial lottery draw will be held Feb. 26.

Shrum Among Seven Named To BCBC Board

Seven men have been appointed directors of the B.C. Buildings Corp. replacing an interim board of three cabinet ministers named when the crown corporation was created in 1976.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser, the minister responsible for the BCBC, will continue on as a director.

He will be joined by two-year appointees Dr. Gordon Shrum, former B.C. Hydro chairman and project chairman of the BCBC's Vancouver courthouse project ; E.A. Robinson, a vice-president of the BCBC and Angus Ree, a Vancouver laweyr.

Named to three year terms are : John Pitcher, president and chief executive officer of BCBC ; George Rigsby, a Quesnel chartered accountantand Walter Badun, a Vancouver businessman.

The BCBC will come into full operation April 1 when it takes over the functions formerly carried out by the public works ministry.

The other two cabinet ministers who served on the board were Finance Minister Evan Wolfe and Consumer and Corporate Services Minister Rafe Mair.

Canada is Foreign, Que. Visitors Told

WASHINGTON (CP) — Quebec literature to be handed out to tourists from the province's new tourism office here has neatly disposed of any possible problems with Labrador.

A map of Canada provided at the office, and included in a promotion kit for Thursday's official opening divides Canada into two sections: The Province of Quebec, with all of Labrador included, is labelled Quebec and the rest of the country, drawn on a smaller scale than Quebec, is labelled Canada.

Part of the geographical region of Labrador belongs to the province of Newfoundland, and the boundary has long been a sore point with the governments of the two provinces.

Attached to the map is a fact sheet about Quebec, which lists major cities, gross national product, airports and tourism statistics.

The fact sheet also lists Quebec's "offices abroad," and includes the entry "Canada—Toronto (to be opened March, 1, 1978)" after sites in Europe and the United States.

Quebec Tourism Minister Yves Duhaime, who confirmed that the map and fact sheet are among Quebec literature at the tourist office, dismissed the map as an artist's conception.

When asked whether the Canadian office should not be listed separately from offices abroad, he grinned and said: "If you look at it from a constitutional stand, you may be right — for a time."

However, Duhaime knocked down any suggestions that the office would engage in political lobbying or propaganda on behalf of the Quebec separatist government.

The primary task of the office, he noted, would be to drum up convention business in the U.S., in conjunction with plans to build a new convention centre in Montreal. He said that soon-to-be-relaxed U.S. laws restricting U.S. conventions in Canada caused the cancellations of at least 30 conventions in Montreal in 1977.

Duhaime also told reporters that Quebec is seeking to wipe out an annual $200 million tourism deficit with the United States.

Deficit $6.2B

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government incurred a spending deficit of nearly $6.2 billion in the first nine months of the 1977-78 fiscal year, the finance department reported Thursday.

Government spending for the nine months ending Dec. 31 totalled $29.7 billion, with revenue at $23.5 billion.

The deficit for the period is almost equal to last year's total deficit of $6.3 billion.

ROONEY IN A RUCKUS

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP David Rooney, already facing a charge of political corruption, was charged jointly with his wife Ruth Thursday with common assault and damage to property.

The charges arose from a fracas at the couple's downtown apartment Wednesday evening involving a freelance photographer and a newspaper reporter.

Tentative Pact In Tel Strike

Negotiators for the B.C. Telephone Co. and the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union have reached tentative agreement on a three-year contract to end a 10-week strike, company spokesman Keith Mathews said today.

He said the contract is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977, and expires Dec. 31, 1979. Details were not released.

Negotiators began discussions today on a return-to-work agreement, Mathews said, adding that the contract agreement was reached late Thursday.

Indications are that when a return-to-work agreement is reached, the matter will be put to the union membership for ratification.

If the membership agrees to the new contract, workers will be phased in to their jobs. The whole process, barring a break-down in talks, could take another week.

A news blackout had been imposed after a week of intensive negotiations began in Vancouver with federal mediator Mike Collins.

The company and the union had been discussing a report by Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court, who was appointed industrial inquiry commissioner in the dispute.

Justice Hutcheon's 22-page report recommended adoption of the company's proposal for an eight-member union-management committee, presided over by an independent chairman, to handle the contracting-out matters that have been the crux of the dispute.

It also recommended the striking employees get wage increases of 45 cents an hour and 32 cents an hour during a two-year contract. Base rates ranged from $6.42 an hour to $9.75 an hour under the previous contract which expired Dec. 31, 1976.

NEWS BRIEFS

No Exception

VANCOUVER - Regulations will not be relaxed to allow Robbie Sherrell, a U.S. citizen, to take over as president of ICBC, federal Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said Thursday. See story on Page 7.

Spy Fear Cited

MONTREAL (CP) — The former head of the RCMP's security service says at least six countries had spies operating in the Montreal area in the early 1970s and at least two of the countries were directing their espionage at the Quebec separatist movement. See story on page 12.

Strikers Stay Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Maintenance workers were still off the job today at Ottawa's main postal station in the second day of a rotating strike. The 40 workers are members of the General Labor and Trades Group (GLT) of the Public Service Alliance of Canada and are responsible for maintaining the postal-sorting equipment.

OLD BUCKETHEAD, a hound, got that way because he kept ripping out stitches following an operation and a Toronto vet decided to stop that business by installing a plastic bucket over its head. Now he's recovering nicely, says owner George Anderson, although his pride may have been wounded.

2 Hostage-Takers Surrender At Pen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Hostage-takers Ralph Saumer, Dave Bennett and two unidentified hostages walked out the front door of the fortress-like British Columbia penitentiary late Thursday as the crisis, now in its seventh day, drew closer to a climax.

Saumer and Bennett, the first of five hostage-takers to give themselves up, were taken to RCMP cells in the Vancouver area, RCMP Inspector Les Holmes said.

The two hostages, who police said were in good condition after 133 hours in confinement, were debriefed on the penitentiary grounds. Police said they dictated which hostages would be freed.

RCMP have said there was collusion between some of the hostages and the five prisoners in the escape bid. A rented car was found outside the prison, located on the banks of the Fraser River east of Vancouver, containing clothing, food, drugs and .38-calibre ammunition.

Police have not said which hostages would be named in any conspiracy charges arising out of the incident.

Robert Desjarlais, Dennis Lavallee, Hanna Bauer, Mary Wildgrube, Betsy Wood, Sandra Meadley and Gay Hoon were held by the prisoners before the latest development. Thirteen persons were originally seized.

Police have said the prisoners have a handgun. No weapons were given up during the surrender.

The two hostages released brought to four the number freed Thursday. Five remain prisoners of convicted contract killer Andrew Bruce, 28, Steven Albert Hall, 28, serving 15 years for attempted murder and Richard Wright, an armed robber, in the prison's visiting area.

Meanwhile, a hostage-taking incident at the federal penitentiary service in Dorchester, N.B., ended just before dawn today with the safe release of guard Hugh Maloney and surrender of two convicts holding him since last Saturday night.

ERROR IN TYPING WINS DISCHARGE

VERNON (CP) — An RCMP typist's spelling error has won Reginald Edwards dismissal of a charge of driving with a blood alcohol reading of over .08.

Judge Jurgen Behncke dismissed the charge because the breath analysis certificate prepared by a police typist said the Vernon truck driver had been tested with "pitassium dichromate."

The correct name for the chemical is potassium dichromate.

Judge Behncke agreed with Edwards' counsel, Robert Gillespie, that "the difference of one letter in the name of a chemical can be enormously significant."

Gillspie said the spelling error suggested the wrong chemical could have been used in the breath test. Crown prosecutor Bob Williams said the verdict may be appealed.

Acadians Claim Bombing

MONCTON (CP) — RCMP in rural St. Quentin, N.B. said today they have "four or five suspects" but had made no arrests in the firebombing early Thursday of a Canada Manpower centre there.

Constable Marcel LeBlanc said the investigation was moving "slow but sure" and "we don't know a lot more."

A letter was found in a Moncton telephone booth late Thursday, after anonymous telephone calls to the French-language daily L'Evangeline and Radio-Canada, in which a group calling itself the "Beaubassin cell" said the "Restigouche cell" was responsible for the bombing.

The note, hand-written in block letters, did not indicate what group if any might encompass the "cells."

Observers were attempting to unravel whether the incident was an isolated one or, as the note indicated, part of a radical campaign on behalf of Acadian interests.

Donatien Gaudet, president of the New Brunswick Society of Acadians, said today in an interview there is no link between his organization and any Acadian groups claiming a link with the fire bombing.

Gaudet, asked whether he believed any Acadian group was behind the incident, said:

"Your interpretation is as good as mine. Anyone can pretend (to represent someone). Anyone can sign a letter."

Envoy Expelled

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States today ordered the expulsion of Vietnam's ambassador to the United Nations, Dinh Ba Thi, named earlier this week in an espionage case, the state department announced.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau used the opening of the British Columbia Winter Games Friday to tell Canadians they will have to lower living expectations to adjust to tougher economic conditions.

"There's no free lunch," he said.

At opening ceremonies in a packed hotel ballroom here, he told a receptive audience that Canadians need more "faith, confidence and belief in themselves."

That would aid both the nation's economic strength and national unity, he said.

Defending his government's economic policies, he said Ottawa cannot stop oil-producing nations from raising oil prices nor can Canada influence rising prices for imported food.

There are hard choices to be made, and federal and provincial finance ministers will start that process at an economic summit in Ottawa Feb. 13-15.

If governments want to continue advancing social legislation and protecting the environment someone has to pay, Trudeau said.

Competition is going to get much tougher because of developing third world countries and continuing energy price increases.

It's adjusting to these problems that now is causing Canadians so much difficulty, Trudeau said.

But even though conditions are difficult, this could also be seen as a time of great opportunity, the prime minister added.

"We're going through a crisis . . . we're not seeing the bottom fall out of our economy," he said.

CONTEST WINNER Mrs.W.H. Christmas, of 1326 Richardson, collects $300 for getting all answers correct in last week's Prevue Puzzle. Mrs. Christmas, who admits to being a bit of a crossword freak, said she has been entering the Prevue contest ever since it began. Contest prize now goes back to $50

New provincial regulations governing the conduct of strike and lockout votes will turn the clock back 20 years, a B.C. Federation of Labor spokesman said today.

Secretary-treasurer Len Guy said he cannot see any necessity for the new regulations announced Thursday by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

"Secret votes already are used to get a true indication of a membership's feeling, otherwise the union membership would be in trouble," he said.

The result of the regulations will be the creation of another government bureaucracy at the taxpayers' expense, Guy added.

John Schibli, second vice-president of the Victoria Labor Council, said he objects to the new regulations because they imply monkeying around with the vote.

"We are completely above board when it comes to conducting votes of any kind."

Williams said the Labor Relations Board will be responsible for the regulations, which take effect March 1.

He said all employees in a bargaining unit will be eligible to participate in the strike vote, whether or not they are members of the union.

He said all strike and lockout votes must be secret under the Labor Code, as amended in 1976.

"There have never been any regulations or any standards set out as to how that vote should be conducted," said Williams. "That step has been taken today."

He said the regulations require unions and affiliated employers to give the board prior notice of proposals to seek strike or lockout authority and to appoint returning officers and scrutineers.

"The board must then appoint persons to supervise the votes," he said.

AVALANCHES

GENEVA (Reuter) — At least 10 persons were killed when strong winds sent scores of avalanches cascading down the French, Italian and Swiss Alps during the night and early today.

Many intenational passenger trains had to be diverted in both Italy and Switzerland because avalanches covered the tracks.

PRAYER'S ANSWER OVERFLOWETH

BRISBANE (AP) — Premier Joh Bjelke-Petersen, a lay preacher who led prayers for rain to break the state's worst drought last month, turned down a request today to pray again to make it stop raining.

"Everybody should be thankful that God has broken the drought throughout north Queensland," the head of the state government said.

"It is phenomenal that the rain has caused such benefits to the entire state when the situation was so desperate just a few weeks ago."

Mayor Rex Pilbeam of Rockhampton made the request and said his city "has seen enough rain to last for months."

"I've been praying for the rain to stop, but it looks as though the premier has a direct line."

The northwest monsoon started Sunday, bringing record rainfalls all over Queensland. Rivers overflowed and people have been rescued from flooded areas.

New $150M Gas Lines Approved

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The National Energy Board Thursday approved construction of two northeastern B.C. natural gas pipelines at a combined cost of $150 million.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said work will start immediately on both the 101-mile, $122 million Grizzly Valley and the 96-mile, $28.5 million Silver Dahl pipeline projects that will help bring out the estimated 2.5 to 3 trillion cubic feet of gas in the area.

In addition to the two pipelines, construction will start this month on a $75 million gas processing plant at High Hasler in the Chetwynd area.

The plant will not be ready for operation until September, 1979, but both pipelines will be completed this year — Silver Dahl in April and Grizzly Valley by early fall.

The projects had been approved by the provincial cabinet in December, 1976, and have been waiting federal government approval for the past 14 months.

Last year the government ordered a judicial inquiry into the Grizzly Valley pipeline following accusations by the NDP that windfall profits had been made in stock transactions involving Quasar Petroleum Ltd. and Cheyenne Petroleum Ltd. because of inside information.

Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith found that there had been no breach of the law but that four people were in a position where there was a rule against their purchasing shares in the companies involved.

Arthur Weeks, Phillips' special adviser, was fired as soon as the minister was informed he had purchased 3,000 shares of Cheyenne Petroleum.

Arthur Cameron, Phillips' constituency secretary, resigned after being asked to do so when it was learned he had purchased 1,000 shares in each of Quasar and Cheyenne.

Two geologists with the provincial government were also dismissed when it was learned they had purchased shares in the two firms.

At peak construction, it is expected 450 men will work on the Grizzly Valley line, 410 on the Silver Dahl and 300 on

TOWN TALK

One of Town Talk's unpaid informers tells us that those vague rumors of a new weekly newspaper being launched in Victoria are now taking on greater substance, and the first issue of the journal — to be called the Victoria Sun — could be out as early as mid-March.

This, despite the fact that the principal money man behind the venture, former Victoria mayor Peter Pollen, is still saying "there's a very, very small basis" for the rumors.

According to this column's information, the editor of the new weekly will be Peter McNelly, publisher of the bimonthly provincial affairs magazine B.C. Today, who recently announced that it was suspending publication.

General manager will be Lorne Whyte, who held that position on the former thrice-weekly giveaway, The Victorian.

And the editorial staff is reported to include George Gerhardt, the Victorian's show biz writer.

There have been discussions with with Rollie Rose, publisher of the Ladysmith Chemainus Chronicle, to print the Victoria Sun on the firm's new press in Ladysmith.

And what kind of newspaper can we expect?

According to Pollen, when he first played down the rumor a few weeks ago, it will be a "once-a-week look at Victoria life . . . a sort of successor to the Victorian but hopefully a little bit more sophisticated and balanced."

There will a number of columnists and Pollen says the paper will carry "vigorous opinion from the left, the right and the middle."

ICBC's $80,000 headman-elect, Robbie Sherrell, will need bionic powers to untangle some of the twists in car insurance red tape.

Most drivers have by now discovered that while the corporation demands the form be signed in two places, there's only one place to sign.

Sherrell will also have to learn to live with ICBC's computer, which is a winner if we ever saw one.

We've learned of one man, who lost his licence to the sheriff last year after an impaired charge gave him too many points, who got his ICBC renewal form in the mail anyway — with a $29 discount for safe driving.

A group of S.J. Willis students almost lost their Mediterranean cruise after working for the trip two years.

The 20-day cruise was scheduled to begin at the March spring break — but after getting permission from Greater Victoria school board, the group of 30 students and two teachers were informed it was booked solid.

Thanks to a little wheeling and dealing by New World Educational Cruises, the students are going on a different cruise that is better than the original, according to Dennis St. Clair, one of the organizing teachers.

The new cruise starts April 16. It's been chopped to 16 days so students only miss two school days and scheduled stops in London have been omitted, but the other ports of call on the itinerary are more exciting, St. Clair says.

POLYGRAPH ON UPSWING

Don't Call It A Lie Detector

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Only an iron-clad alibi these days eliminates the possibility a crime suspect will be asked to take a polygraph test.

The polygraph — a sensitive instrument that monitors physiological responses to measure truth or deceit — is one of the most controversial investigative techniques used today.

In North America about two million polygraph examinations take place every year.

So far polygraph operators in the United States are ahead of Canada in creating uses for the sophisticated device.

They use it not only to aid criminal investigations, but for lucrative commercial purposes like screening job applicants and nailing cheating husbands.

But interest is increasing rapidly in Canada and the B.C. attorney-general's ministry is considering licensng examiners.

The RCMP has accepted the polygraph as an investigative tool. There are now 15 full-time operators in most provinces and the force recently opened a unit in Victoria with a full-time expert.

Since he started two months ago, Sgt. Kenn Kardish hasn't been an easy man to track down. As the Victoria polygraph examiner, he's on call to every detachment and all municipal police forces on Vancouver Island. His equipment, which costs several several thousand dollars, fits neatly into a small space and can be carried along on out-of-town assignments.

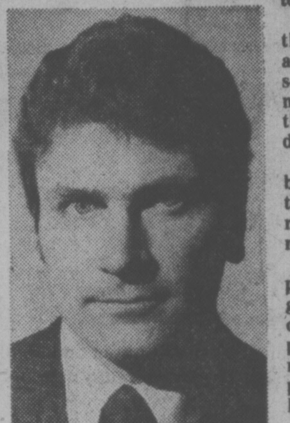
Because the polygraph is a new concept that eludes definition — some call it a science, others an art — its effectiveness is debated by experts in the courts.

In a Vancouver murder trial last year polygraph results were admitted as evidence — rare in a Canadian court — but the jury rejected the evidence and pronounced the defendant guilty.

"There are no guidelines yet," Kardish says, because the technique is in its infancy. Like radar and the breathalizer, the polygraph must prove its accuracy through performance.

The force doesn't consider the polygraph a gauge of guilt or innocence, Kardish emphasizes.

It monitors cardio patterns (heart beat), respiration and skin response to certain questions. The examiner interprets the results of each test and evaluates the whole session, which may last two hours.



KARDISH
. . . Island RCMP expert

Kardish, who was involved in police investigation for six years at the Courtenay detachment, recently completed an intensive two-month course at a New York polygraph school that is used to train all RCMP operators.

There are no polygraph schools in Canada, probably because the demand is not great enough.

All examinations are voluntary and usually begin with a pre-test interview when the subject is informed of his or her rights.

Suspects get the chance to explain their side of the story and Kardish tells them what questions he will ask.

There are no surprises; the suspect is told everything that will happen during the actual test, which usually lasts three or four minutes.

Kardish follows a standard testing program and repeats the test as many as five times until a pattern is established.

It's important the subject relax.

Fear of detection and total recall of the incident in question are neccessary for the test to work.

If a person is truthful, there's nothing to worry about, but if the suspect has something to hide, the instrument will detect deceptive thoughts because the body doesn't lie.

Guilt quickens the heartbeat, causes blood pressure to rise, makes breathing erratic, tenses muscles and moistens palms.

Some people, a very small percentage, beat the polygraph simply because they cannot be tested. Retarded people and those suffering mental illness like schizophrenia are included on this list.

Because there are many unknown areas, the polygraph is used mainly to speed up investigation and seldom as trial evidence.

Breaking into what they see as a virtually untapped market are about a dozen private consultants across Canada.

A background in detective work and the lure of an exciting and different career prompted Mrs. Perry to take an eight-week training program at an accredited Los Angeles polygraph school.

One of a handful of graduates, she started work for an L.A. detective agency but decided to return to Victoria.

Mrs. Perry says an interesting highlight will be informing the public here about the polygraph and its capabilities while destroying the myths.

Contrary to popular belief, the polygraph doesn't detect lies; it measures body response to verbal stimuli, she says, and should not be called a "lie-detector."

Convinced the instrument is almost completely accurate, she says a bad examiner can jeopardize the credibility of the polygraph through poor testing and misinterpretation of the results.

Recognized schools use a similar group of standardized techniques, making it possible for different examiners to analyse one set of tests and come up with the same results, she says.

The most popular technique starts with several innocuous questions like "What is your name?" and "Where do you live?" followed by the crucial question of guilt or innocence and a special control question like "Have you ever stolen anything?"

The innocent person is not particularly worried about the crucial question, but the control question should stir feelings of guilt or anxiety. A guilty person would respond the opposite way, according to the theory.

Objectivity, good character judgement and the ability to make the subject relax are three of the most important qualities an examiner should possess, Mrs. Perry believes.

January Tourist Surge Due to Luck, Says Purdy

Victoria had a tourist surge in January but it was the result of luck, not hard work, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

The oldtimers hockey tournament brought 2,000 visitors to the city, pushing the hotel occupancy rate up to 76 per cent instead of the usual January rate of about 25 per cent.

Restaurants also reported a good month.

The figure skating championships also brought business to the city, he said.

Meanwhile, an economic survey conducted by information director Danny Bowes shows Victoria's economy was slightly improved across the board during January compared with the same month one year ago.

The B.C. Forest Products sawmill had three full shifts totalling 530 employees during the month and its plywood division was about 75 per cent of capacity at 340 employees. Victoria Plywood also reported business was fairly brisk.

Yarrows shipyard employed 425 during January, up from 330 in December. Work will continue to be on hand for at least two months although the situation beyond that is not clear. There are hopes for additional contracts.

Construction activity picked up during the month in the industrial and institutional sector.

Five construction projects are about to begin. These are the Inner Harbor walkway, the $4 million Royal Bank building, the Burnside Bridge project, a new Coast Guard base warehouse and the extension to the Clearihue building at the University of Victoria. In addition, work is under way on Ogden Point dock and the demolition of the grain elevator.

The projects will not be labor intensive, however, and unemployment will remain a problem in the construction trades.

Retail sales were surprisingly strong during January, especially for stores that held prices down and advertised their bargains. Volumes were light during the first week but picked up during the last half of the month. Furniture and appliances sold well.

Logging crews had been laid off through Christmas and into the first week of January but by the third week of the month they were back in full production.

Fishing was quiet as usual in January but 1977 was a good year.

Real estate sales in January totalled $9.9 million on 159 units. This was down from $11.8 million on 200 units the previous January. There were 731 properties listed at month's end, up from 654 at the same time last year.

Downtown Burglars Hit Again

Burglars hit three downtown businesses Thursday night, two of them for the second time in a week.

City police arrested three youths after a 1:30 a.m. break-in at the Cook Inn restaurant, 1031 Cook. Seven bottles of beer and two packages of cigarettes were recovered.

Someone smashed a window to gain entry to the Mohawk station at Gorge and Garbally, where about $25 in change was taken from the till. In a similar break-in last weekend a pop vending machine was destroyed and merchandise worth about $125 stolen.

Nothing was taken from Capital Iron and Metals Ltd., 1832 Store, which was broken into a few days earlier.

Crews Unaware Of Suicide Bid

Two ambulance crews — one a highly-trained paramedic team — stood by in the provincial emergency services' Burnside station Thursday unaware a suicide attempt had been reported in the building.

A Saanich police car and ambulance arrived at the scene, lights flashing and sirens blaring, shortly after 4:15 p.m., a spokesman for the crews said.

The paramedics went outside and were told by the police they were answering an attempted-suicide call. They showed the police the entrance to the building.

The incident occurred only hours after Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier presented a brief to a special meeting of provincial cabinet in the municipal hall.

In the brief, Couvelier stressed Saanich should be allowed to continue operating its own ambulance service.

Barry Carlow, shift supervisor at the provincial emergency's despatch office at Royal Jubilee Hospital, said while the Saanich fire department has a direct line, no notification was given about the emergency.

He said in addition to the direct line at Saanich's firehall on Vernon, the department has been given radios for fast communication.

But neither the line nor the radios were used.

"If we get a call closer to Vernon we're not going to try and have a race," Carlow said. "The closest ambulance should respond in the interest of the patient."

"They know we have a station at Burnside. Our paramedics could have grabbed their kit and got upstairs. They could have walked to the case."

Carlow said the paramedics are the most advanced in B.C. and were trained by the Royal Jubilee Hospital and the Victoria General Hospital."

Carlow said Saanich receives about $200,000 a year from the provincial government's health ministry for its ambulance service and Thursday's call will cost the taxpayers approximately $166.

"It's not only embarrassing — the key factor is that it was not in the best interest of the patient," Carlow said.

He said Saanich never notifies the provincial despatch office even when the call could be responded to faster by a provincial unit.

Speculators Out of Luck

The Capital Regional District's community planning committee made it plain Thursday no development will be allowed in the area.

For the second time the committee clashed with planners and reiterated its earlier stand that the hospital land will remain in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Planner Jim Masterton argued the new hospital will generate pressure for roads, office space and housing. He said a land-use plan, taking about two months, should be given priority.

"If we don't plan properly it will be just one rezoning at a time," Masterton warned.

"The idea of putting it there was that there would be no change in land-use around the hospital. Our plan there is for no change and I don't see that as a two-month priority job," said Metchosin director Mac Titpton.

Chief planner Peter Hammer said although the present plan was for no development his department would like to examine what would happen should this change.

He told the committee land prices around the hospital site have escalated.

Berths for Factory Ships Urged

Victoria could become the hub of a large West Coast fishing industry if berthing facilities were available for up to 10 trawler factory ships, the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce said in a brief to the provincial cabinet Thursday.

The chamber said such an industry, with vessels in the 150- to 250-foot class capable of catching and processing fish ready for export or local consumption, could provide as many as 1,000 permanent jobs in the Victoria area.

Its brief said the federal government is apparently "prepared to abandon Victoria as a major deep-sea port," and urged the provincial government to press for upgrading and expansion of the present fishing industry.

The physical potential exists because Victoria is the first large port of refuge from the North Pacific, according to the chamber.

"Canada has a 200-mile fishing limit recognized by most countries of the world, but the majority of the fish are being given away," the brief stated.

"This year, Russian, Japanese and Polish trawlers will take thousands of tons of sable, hake, pollock and dogfish from these waters. There is a ready market in various parts of the world for all these fish, either as fillets or in fishmeal form.

"The trawler factory ships that catch and process these fish carry all processing equipment and also between 50 and 80 people to do the work."

Among the actions needed to establish a Victoria-based industry would be:

—Reintroduction of the 35 per cent federal subsidy for fishing vessel construction; and the availability of low-cost loans for the balance;

—Improved wharf facilities to handle up to 10 large trawlers, plus assistance in establishing a cold-storage plant at Ogden Point to receive and store frozen fish fillets;

—More patrol vessels to provide stricter enforcement of the 200-mile limit;

—Limitations on foreign fishing vessel licences as the "Canadian fleet" develops.

"At the present time the Canadian government appears to be doing nothing to encourage Canadian participation in what appears to be a very lucrative and labor-intensive industry," the brief said.

Chamber president John Ansell, who presented the brief when the cabinet met at Saanich municipal hall, said later it was difficult to assess how the fishing industry proposal was received by ministers, but he was encouraged to see "one or two nods of agreement" from various quarters.

ESQUIMALT: A starter 2 BR on a duplex zoned large lot. Needs some touching up. 1218 Juno.

SIDNEY: TWO GOODIES: Now here is a 4 year old 3 BR home that can be purchased most reasonably. Owner has been transferred to Alberta and is most anxious to sell. Any reasonable offer will be considered around mid-fourties.

2128 Mills Road. CALL ME A 4-PLEX. Good rental return. You are looking at high eighties when you look at 2010 and 2012 Cardwell. Appt. only.

ARTS AND CRAFTS: Valuable commercial property now selling. POTTERY, MACRAME, WEAVING, KITCHEN BOUTIQUE, ETC. Good area — Shelbourne-Oakland.

GORDON HEAD: UVic. Two super homes. This is a home in the ever popular area close to all levels of education, recreation and trans. 3 BRs, 2 FPs, 3 baths. Lower level completely developed. A real quality home in a newly developed area. How about a Spanish styled 3 BR's, 2 FPs, large family room on ground level plus family room off kitchen. Built-in vacuum system and intercom.

MELODY PLACE: A view lot over half an acre overlooking Saanich inlet. Perc tested, requires a well and someone who loves peace and quietness. Most reasonable price of $26,900. Go out and take a look. This is but a part of our inventory. Call us and tell us what you require and what you may have to sell. Ask about our trade plan. Courtesy to all.

RADIOACTIVE WASTE BASIS FOR LAWSUIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — C.R.F. Holdings, of Surrey, filed a British Columbia Supreme Court lawsuit Thursday against Fundy International Ltd. and Mark Gerald Smerchanski, both of Winnipeg, on grounds it purchased land from the firm which contained radioactive waste.

The Surrey firm is seeking damages for fraudulent misrepresentation, claiming it paid the Winnipeg company $260,000 for property in Surrey which contained radioactive waste.

C.R.F. says it bought the property from Smerchanski in 1974 on the condition that certain industrial waste left on the land was harmless and could be used as land fill.

The firm says another condition of the sale was that Fundy would pay for storage of material and arrange for its removal within a resonable time.

C.R.F. says it has been forced to store the barrelled radioactive waste at considerable expense in a barricaded area because of government regulations on the handling of radioactive properties.

FISH CATCH $163M IN '77

VANCOUVER (CP) — The landed value of the British Columbia fishing catch in 1977 was $163 million, Wally Johnson, regional director-general of the federal fisheries department, said Thursday.

He said the landed value of salmon for 1977 was $106 million, which represented $230 million at the wholesale level.

The landed value of herring for 1977 was $25.3 million, which represented a wholesale value of $90 million.

HATTER ADMITS MORALE LOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — New conservation officers coming out of the British Columbia Institute of Technology are more interested in becoming resource managers than policemen, Dr. James Hatter, former fish and wildlife director, said Thursday. Hatter told a provincial inquiry into the issuing of guiding licences that there is a morale problem in the branch but said it was not as extensive as suggested by some witnesses.

Hatter said that the branch's predecessor, the B.C. Game Commission, was nothing more than a policing agency and many of the older members have not been able to adapt to the new concepts of resources management.

CBC Series Looks At Golden Days

The Northerners, a new 12-part series of TV programs featuring the people of the north who reminisce about their unique experiences begins Thursday, February 9th at 7:30 p.m. on CBC.

Bob Switzer shared those memories during a recent journey that took him from the old mining areas of British Columbia, into the Yukon of the gold rush days, through the rich McKenzie Delta and across the ice pack into the high Arctic.

Today, Canada's north is a booming frontier of exploration and development. Its residents have access to most of the comforts of southern society.

But the oldtimers remember a different North — when the trapping was good and life was free and independent. It was more than just 'the good old days' — it was another world. And now it's all but gone.

Soon the old folks too will be gone — but they still have their memories of those golden days.

The Northerners series looks at some of the major influences for change in the north over the past one hundred years. It does so by listening to people.

This series of 12 programs falls into three well-defined sections: Programs one through seven concentrate on the Western Arctic featuring people in Aklavik, Inuvik, Tuktoyaktuk and Sachs Harbour who talk about the many outside influences which have shaped their world. Accompanying Bob Switzer in these seven programs is Sven Johannsen, a resident of the north for 35 years and a friend to many of the oldtimers in the area.

Programs eight and nine are centered in the Stewart area of B.C. and recall the incredible feats of the hard-rock mining days. Ian McLeod recalls the mining era and Lance Potterton, a former Mountie, tells of his days as a lawman in the Stewart area.

Programs ten through twelve are about the gold rush days, from Dawson and the Klondike south to Whitehorse and on down through the White Pass to the sea at Skagway, Alaska. Those exciting days are recalled by Clarry Craig who was born and raised in Dawson City.

The first program of the series, on Thursday, February 9th is subtitled "The Whalers of the Arctic" and features 70-year-old Ted Pedersen who as a small boy first went to sea with his father, one of the great whaling captains of the early part of the century. The program takes Ted Pedersen to modern day Herschel Island and Tuktoyaktuk in the Western Arctic where a few scattered relics of the whaling era still remain.

The Northerners was three years in the planning. The production team consisted of Bob Switzer, Derek Gardner and Tony Gilbert. The cameraman was Roy Luckow. Sound recordist: Hans Fousek.

Many of the programs in the series use some rare old film depicting the eras under discussion. All such film was obtained from private collections and has never before been seen on TV.

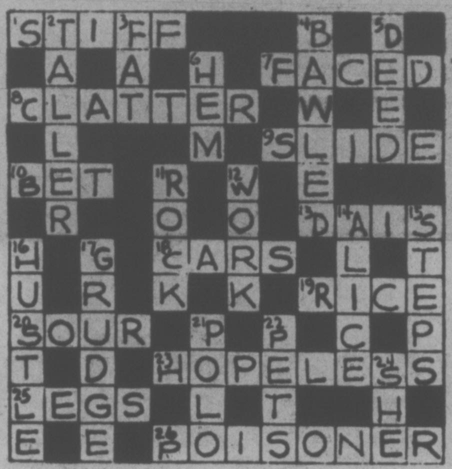
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

7. FACED not paced or raced. "FACED" (competed with in whatever event might have been involved) links up more comprehensively with "the field of athletics, generally." It is in running, more specifically, that a contestant is paced or raced.

8. CLATTER not clutter. Such a man is primarily in need of peace and quiet. He may well be indifferent to a certain amount of domestic clutter.

9. SLIDE not glide. Since "glide" suggests a certain dignity of motion, SLIDE links up more convincingly with "more or less rapidly."

10. BET not met. There is no evident reason why to have "met with success," in an unspecific sense, should involve information. The idea of a BETting tip is very apt.

13. DAIS not dams. Dams withstand water pressure, rather than "bear weight" in the ordinary sense.
18. CARS not care. Maintenance work is care in a sense; it "involves" care in a pretty general sense, and it involves CARS in the case of "certain workers."
19. RICE not nice. The scornful note due to the clue's inclusion of the word "even," links up well with the humble RICE pudding; a nice pudding may be quite an achievement. Also, there is no understood procedure (so as to "know how") to make a nice pudding, so regarded.
20. SOUR not soup. SOUR is the more reasonable answer, since a nice savory soup may well be enjoyed even if the child is over-fond of sweet things.
23. HOPELESS not homeless. The disasters would be understood simply to render people homeless, rather than to engender "homeless circumstances." In this respect, HOPELESS is more apt.
26. POISONER not poisoned. The POISONER may, or may not, know the antidote to the poison he or she has used. The poisoned person may well not even know what poison is involved, so the question of knowing the antidote is hardly applicable.

CLUES DOWN:

2. TALLER not talker. Of the two, the husband is usually the TALLER, though it "may be" the wife. Why should either one be acknowledgedly "the talker"?
3. FAT not fit. One may doubt that many men simply "expect to stay" fit as a natural effect; it is rather that they hope or try to keep fit.
4. BAWLED not bailed. BAWLED is more directly to the point; one doesn't want to be BAWLED out. In the case of bailed, there is some misdirection of emphasis; it is more a question of being in trouble with the police, or in fear of conviction, etc.
5. DEED not feed. A good DEED can be a donation (in the definition: 'act of donating'), but "feed" is the wrong sort of word. (The donor gives food, etc., and the recipient has a good feed.)
11. ROCK not sock. The clue makes it clear that there is an advantage. ROCK is more positively apt, since your opponent may be practically unaffected when you sock him with just one good punch.
12. WORK not pork. "Good WORK" is understood to be praiseworthy, but good pork is the very least one expects.
16. HUSTLE not bustle. To "HUSTLE," or work fast, is definitely apt. "Bustle" implies a certain fussiness or show of activity, which is not especially wanted.

John Hearn's Collectibles

The most neglected of all collectibles is, I am convinced, the collecting of autographs. I say this in terms of interest, relative costlessness and the potential for long term financial rewards.

This applies both to autographs from the past and those of contemporary celebrities.

If you write to Mr. Trudeau, for example, you will receive a typewritten reply signed with what appears to be an authentic signature but is in fact the work of an automatic pen. Getting any piece of paper out of him signed with his own hand requires a great deal of ingenuity — and that is what autograph collecting is all about.

In the days before telephones and typewriters, communication depended almost entirely on the handwritten word as a result of which, surviving autograhic pieces from the past are possibly MORE numerous than those of today. The trick, of course, is to pick as your target those whom you believe will be of historical significance a hundred years from now — and that calls for a most perceptive study of the contemporary scene.

Among the best known of Canadian collectors is Harvey Haber who specializes in Canadian prime ministers — although he is not averse to picking up handwritten notes from scientists and astronauts. In pursuit of his hobby, Haber has become something of an expert at deciphering the handwriting of Sir Robert Borden, Arthur Meighan and Louis St. Laurent.

His specialty is Sir John A. Macdonald whom he regards as a victim of Canadian neglect. He has been pressing the federal government to christen its proposed February statutory holiday, 'Sir John A. Macdonald Day'.

Most of Haber's collection of Canadian prime ministers has been donated by people who are glad to know that their pieces will be properly protected, framed and displayed for the pleasure of others. Most difficult to obtain are written mementos of Charles Tupper, Mackenzie Boswell, J. S. D. Thompson, J. C. Abbott, Alexander Mackenzie — and Sir John A. himself. If anyone would like to get in touch with Harvey Haber, I will be glad to forward your letters.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

For Ever It Is Not

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — The actors are beginning to let down on "Forever Fernwood," thinking about other jobs. Production ends Feb. 24, completing 26 weeks, meaning the show will go off the air around the end of March or early April.

"Viewers didn't know the show was on this fall," explains Greg (Tom Hartman) Mullavey. "The name change killed us."

Greg was all for keeping the original title, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," even though Louise Lasser's Mary left the show. Tom would get himself another girl and remarry, and she could be called Mary. Why should a show undergo a title change just because the star leaves? Greg believes fans would have accepted a new Mary.

Apart from the title change, "Forever Fernwood" faced other potholes. Boss Norman Lear wasn't around very often, preferring to concentrate on "America Tonight." (That's the new name for the upcoming revamping of "Fernwood Tonight.")

"We lost the focus on the show and never got it back," Mullavey observes. "Originally 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman' was about a consumer housewife. When Mary left, that fell out the window. I fought for the old approach with a new wife, but lost out. We also had problems with Tom's character. Writers were giving him educated language. Now Tom should be strictly a blue-collar man — no fancy dialogue. He's never been a true blue-collar man, not in my book, and that's a shame."

At the moment nobody knows how the series is going to end. Currently, the Fernwood characters are excited over visitors from outer space. With that in mind, Mullavey visualizes a wild finale with all the Fernwood residents going off in a spaceship, waving bye-bye to viewers.

Whenever "Forever Fernwood" ends, some 500 episodes from the beginning of "MH, MH" will be available for syndication, enough to run for years. No wonder no one at Tandem Productions is shedding tears over "FF's" departure.

Certainly Greg Mullavey isn't. "MH, MH" put Greg on the map with fans and Hollywood producers. When Louise Lasser left, Greg's manager urged his client to join Louise in the walk. But Greg hung on for the best reason going — he and his wife Meredith MacRae bought a home in Encino, so the actor needed the bread.

PLOT PORTENTS: "One Life to Live" happy honeymooners, Jenny and Brad, have their first marital spat and Marco Dane makes it quite clear that he has designs on Becky, whose innate innocence prevents her from seeing what is really coming off.

"Edge of Night's Deborah Saxon is seriously thinking of becoming a police woman after her undercover assignment with the "red-head murderer" case. At the end of the week, April goes under the knife!

Greg Mullavey

Look for Fred Barton to get burned in his stupid malpractice suit on "Days of Our Lives." Marlena and Don argue, then make up — but a rough road lies ahead as Don goes campaigning and wants everything cleared through him. Sneaky Larry is moving in on Julie and that's bad, bad news. Only Robert appears to have Larry's number.

Lorie's best seller, "In My Sister's Shadow," is going to cause havoc on "The Young and the Restless." Even Snapper is unable to predict how Chris will react if Karen goes back to her parents, the Beckers; and Jill needs all the help she can get from Greg to handle crafty Kay Chancellor.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Lenka Peterson, who is playing Evelyn Reedy, the new housekeeper for the Hartfords, in "Search for Tomorrow," was actually on the soap opera 15 years ago in the role of Isabelle Moore. As faithful fans may recall.

Milee Taggart (Janet Collins of "Search for Tomorrow") was recently spotted on the set of "As the World Turns" and many thought she was defecting, but she had a reasonable explanation. She was watching director Allen Fristoe put the "World Turners" through their paces.

Obscure Experience

"And the Soul Shall Dance," a window into the obscure pre-Second World War Japanese experience in America, is the dramatic production to be featured on Hollywood Television Theatre, Thursday, Feb. 9 at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

It is general knowledge that at the outbreak of the Second World War, the Japanese people living in the United States were forced into internment in detention camps. "After that traumatic experience," notes executive producer Norman Lloyd, "all they wanted to do was assimilate."

But before the war, as this poignant, semi-autobiographical drama by Wakako Yamauchi makes clear, the Japanese had a very different perception of their life in America. They simply wanted to accumulate enough money to return to a comfortable life in their beloved homeland.

Today's Highlights

Northerners, on 2 at 7:30 p.m. The first in a series of 12 with Bob Switzer as host. In this episode Switzer shares memories of the North with Ted Pedersen, an old man of the sea, now in his 70s.

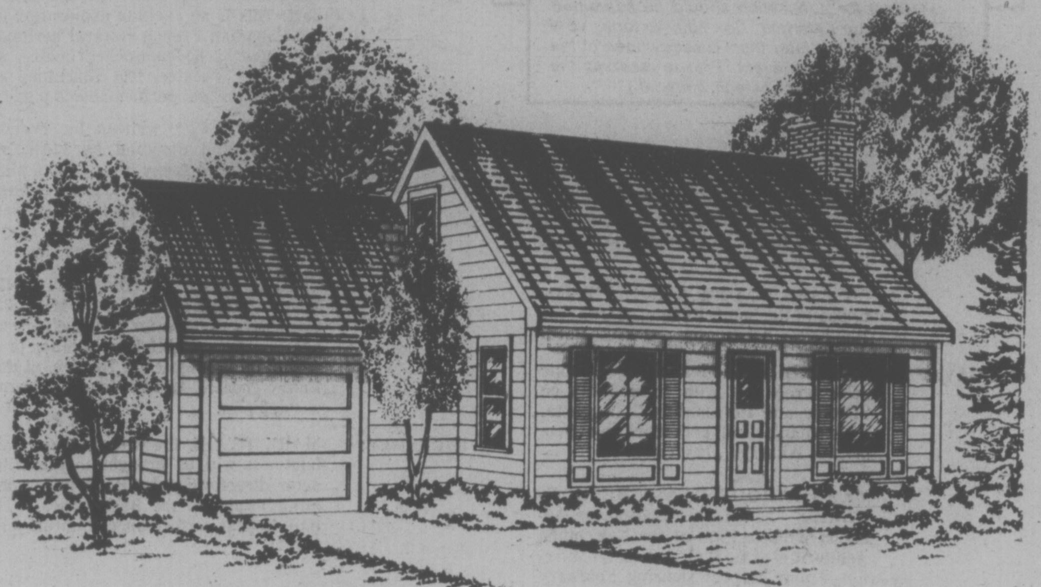
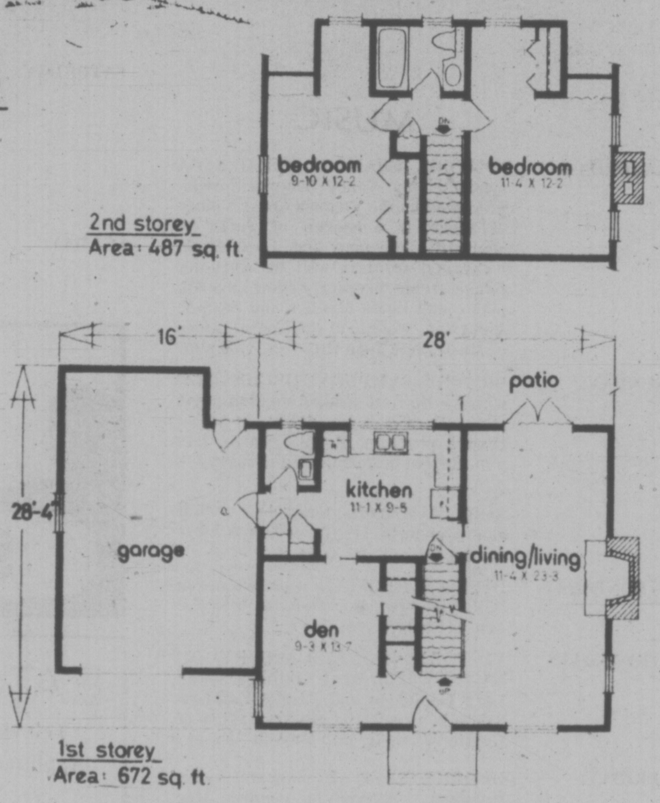
Home of the Week



PLAN Nº 65-1152
WIDTH: 44 ft.



Spacious Traditional Cottage

This two bedroom traditional cottage conceals an amazing amount of space within its shutter-accented and horizontal siding exterior.

The entrance leads immediately into the large den on the left, or the enormous rectangular living/dining room combination with centrally-positioned, raised hearth fireplace. The dining room is separated from the patio by center-opening double doors — the latter quite simply modified to sliding glass for those who prefer.

The single car garage provides ample room to the rear for a workshop for the home handyman, Extra space alongside the garage allows for the future development of a good-sized utility and mud room combination, or a family room for active children.

Each of the bedrooms has generous closet space and an L-shaped layout which again allows for future growth. The master could have a large walk-in closet, or some combination of lounge-closet-ensuite, etc. The second bedroom could also have ensuite with shower or lounge in its extra space, for those who require additional room, the downstairs den could be turned into either a bedroom or office for the business or professional family.

And we still have a full basement to be developed into a recreation room hobby area, storage facilities, or whatever, for the growing family.

Plans for design No. 65-1152 may be obtained at a cost of $50 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $4.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series #34 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 59 cents postage and handling.) To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Could you plese tell me what happened to "Young Dan'l Boone?" I really looked forward to seeing it every week. It wasn't on the air long enough for many people to see it. Will it be coming back? — B.P.M., Greensboro, N.C.

A. "Young Dan'l Boone," one of eight new shows on CBS this season, was cancelled. In fact, only two members of the CBS freshman class remain on the air. They are "On Our Own" and "Lou Grant." The others cancelled included "We've Got Each Other," "Fitzpatrick," "Logan's Run," "Betty White Show" and "Rafferty."

Q. Dee Dee Cohn starred in "You Light Up My Life." She also sang very pretty the song by the same name. She had a television series and also appeared on "Tattletales." Well, how did Debbie Boone end up cashing in on Cohn's fame by recording the theme song from the movie? Cohn could have made the recording. — C.M., San Francisco, Calif.

A. While Ms. Cohn could have recorded the theme song from "You Light Up My Life," record producer Mike Curb felt the song was ideally suited for Debbie Boone. He was right, since the song was No. 1 in the nation for many weeks.

Q. We have a station that shows the old repeats of "My Three Sons." How come the old black and white episodes of the show are not syndicated and shown on television? — W.E., Winslow, Ariz.

A. Most television stations prefer to show films and series that are in color. In the case of "My Three Sons," it was felt the old black and white prints were of poor quality to syndicate.

Q. Where can I obtain the words and music to the theme of "MASH?" — P.R., Victoria, B.C.

A. The sheet music to "Suicide is Painless" is published by Columbia Pictures Publications, 16333 N.W. 54th Ave., Hialeah, Fla. 33014.

Q. My friend says the actor who played the Martian on "My Favorite Martian" also played Mr. Smith on "Lost in Space." I say he's wrong. Who's right? — B.S., Bonnots Mill, Mo.

A. Ray Walston played the Martian while Jonathan Harris played Mr. Smith.

Q. Here's a trivia question. Who played in the series "77 Sunset Strip?" I can remember a few of them but not the entire cast. — D.L., Tullahoma, Tenn.

A. The lineup went something like this: Efrem Zimbalist Jr., who played Stuart Bailey; Jeff Spencer, who played Smith; Louis Quinn, who played Roscoe; Edd Byrnes, who played Kooky, and the late Richard Long, who played Det. Rex Randolph.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Pat Barclay

Timothy Findley is best known in Canada for his co-authorship (with William Whitehead) of the TV serialization of Pierre Berton's The National Dream. His first two novels, The Last of the Crazy People, and The Butterfly Plague, were only minor events. (I picked up a hardcover copy of The Butterfly Plague on a remaindered table a few yeara ago — price, one dollar.) But with the publication of his third novel, titled simply The Wars, Timothy Findley has become A Writer to Watch.

The Wars is the story of Robert Ross, a 19-year-old who joins the army in 1915. Robert is no ordinary soldier; he is athletic, intelligent, sensitive and loving, a combination of qualities hardly destined to form the basis of a successful military career.

Sure enough, he is eventually court-martialled, a war, Findley argues, is no place for the extraordinary person: "I've been through . . . the whole of this extraordinary century — and it's not the extraordinary people who've prevailed upon its madness. Quite the opposite . . . It's the ordinary men and women who've made us what we are. Monstrous, complacent and mad . . . the greatest mistake we made was to imagine something magical separated us from Ludendorff and Kitchener and Foch. Well — Churchill and Hitler, for that matter! Why, such men are just the butcher and grocer — selling us meat and potatoes across the counter. That's what binds us together. They appeal to our basest instincts. The lowest common denominator. And then we turn around and call them extraordinary! . . . You have to be awfully careful how you define the extraordinary. Robert Ross was no Hitler. That was his problem."

The speaker is a nurse who meets Robert Ross toward the end of his life. She is addressing the narrator of The Wars, a researcher seeking to piece together the facts and meaning of Ross' life. The assembled evidence is placed before us in conventional dramatic order, except for a brief prologue which describes the beginning of the novel's climactic scene. (The prologue is repeated, word for word, near the end of the novel, only this time we learn what happens next.)

It is an intriguing method, easily comparable with a documentary film, and readers who grew up watching CBC-TV will find themselves involuntarily supplying appropriate background music to match. Findley's use of the documentary technique in this novel is practical as well as cunning, for it enables him to convey the horrors of war at a distance. Robert Ross' fate is so dreadful that few readers — or writers, for that matter — would relish a closer view of it. The Wars is a vividly successful attempt to portray the human tragedy behind such bald facts as these, about the Somme offensive:

"In the hours between 7:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. (of July 1st, 1916) 21,000 British soldiers were killed — 35,000 were wounded and 600 taken prisoner." Here's a passage dealing with Canadian troops, in February: "When they made their way back through the trench there was no one there alive. They had all been gassed or had frozen to death. Those who lay in water were profiled in ice. Everything was green: their faces — and their fingers — and their buttons. And the snow."

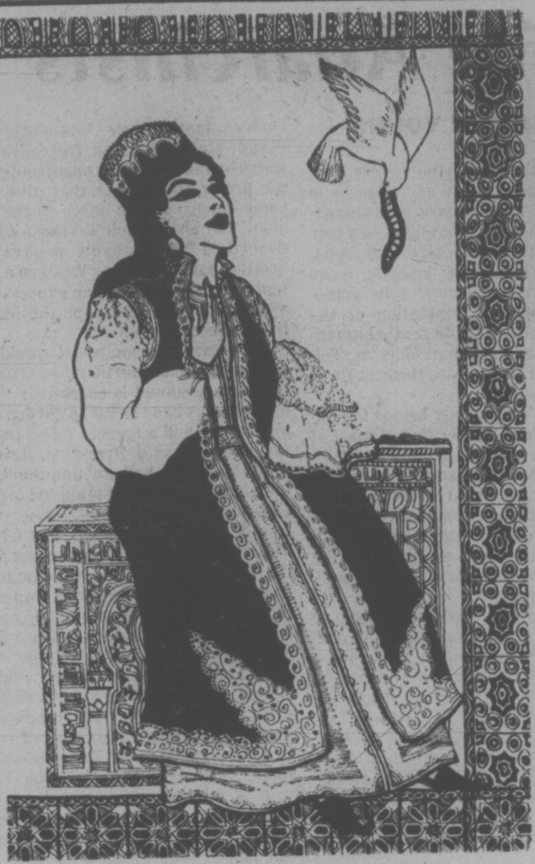
Robert Ross' baptism of fire occurs near Ypres, when the dugout in which he is unable to sleep is blown up. Next he is ordered to place some guns in a crater only 12 yards from the German trenches. He survives a gas attack. Around him, his fellow officers go mad, shoot themselves in despair, desert. Ross holds on.

Finally, his own time comes. He is raped in the dark by four men who are "maybe even his brother officers", bombed in a supply convoy, and put in charge of 60 horses and mules which are shelled to pieces when his commanding officer forbids him to herd them to safety. The animals' agony is too much for Robert to bear, on top of everything else, and he goes "mad".

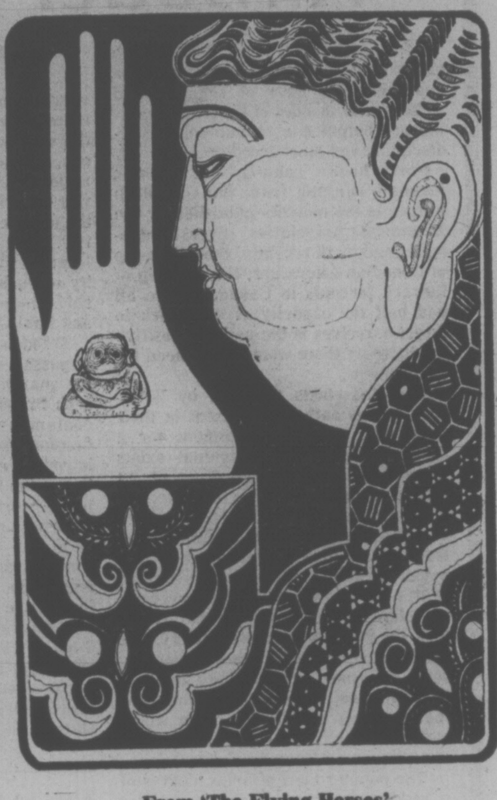
Animals, in The Wars, represent innocence and life, and are the antithesis of human corruption, wars and death. Robert, in his "madness", comes down on the side of innocence and life and is sorely punished for it.

"The Wars" were not fought on the battlefields of Europe alone, Findley tells us, they are present wherever men like Robert Ross find it impossible to be themselves. His book, with its powerful symbols of water and fire, its imaginative and disciplined narrative pattern and wonderfully clear and practised prose, is a remarkable and "extraordinary" achievement.

THE WARS, by Timothy Findley. Clarke Irwin. $9.95.



From 'The Book of Magical Birds'



From 'The Flying Horses'

Nuggets of Pure Gold

By JUDITH TERRY

I have been in danger of judging a book by its cover; not condemning it utterly, but assuming that with a lilac, pink and orange cover of particularly fussy design it couldn't be more than mediocre. In fact The Flying Horses is an unusually beautiful collection of Chinese tales taken from translations of Chinese history and literature by Jo Manton. Arranged in chronological order, the tales date from the sixth century BC down to the present, from ancient popular legend through the building of the Great Wall down to a 20th-century story of the Revolution.

The stories are as varied in type as age, from the comic to the magical to the strange and wondrous. A dragon is cured by a doctor and forever returns to him for doses of its favorite licorice medicine. Fairy princesses with "faces round as the autumn moon, willow-leaf brows, delicate wrists and hands" lure two young men into a secret valley where they idle away the day in silk pyjamas until they return, to find 200 years have passed. Fathers and brothers are ordered away from their grieving families for years to build the Great Wall. The Emperor and his court walk on stilts so that they may not lose face before the barbarians because of their lack of height.

The special merit of the book is that it gives a sense of the landscape and the lives of the people. Running alongside the magical and historical elements is a strong vein of reality. Even the folk-tale characters are much less types than individuals.

The old man listens to the rain rattling against the paper windows and cuts out silhouettes for his little grandson before telling him a story about his days as a powerful minister. The aristocratic lute-player meets a humble peasant who appreciates his music, and they talk, pour wine and play the lute far into the night.

The magistrate orders fresh tea to calm his mind: "Be sure that the leaves are supple as a Tartar horseman's boot, unfold like mist rising from a ravine, gleam like a lake and are soft as a garden newly washed by rain," he instructs, following the classic eighth-century advice.

Most folk-tales embody nuggets of common wisdom, but these tales, no doubt by being Chinese but also by being rendered so gracefully into English, present them with wit and charm, especially in the short poems, one of which is appended to each tale. These, not the usual amateur stuff, are written in the Chinese style by Robert Gittings. So we learn how after Pan Ku, the great dwarf, made the world, men and women "loved to hear tall pine-trees riding the night winds, or the bamboo's whisper in a summer evening. They loved to feel the autumn rain fall in silk threads, to see white plum blossom in spring, or the first snowfall of winter." The King asks the Sage, " 'Do the wise and good also enjoy these things?' and the Sage replies, 'O King, 'only the wise and good know how to enjoy them'."

Learn from this fable. Man
The educated flea
Can jump just as far as
His education allows.

Folk-tale collections from around the world are two-a-penny these days, but there are not very many from China and few indeed are so well done. I advise you to throw away the dustjacket and prepare to enjoy yourself.

Who does not remember the old tales?
Fingers of firelight on the walls,
lances of sleet on the shutter.
Whoever does not remember the old tales
Has lost the key that opens the door of life.

In A Book of Magical Birds Margaret Mayo has collected stories largely from 19th-century sources. Her re-tellings are not always satisfactory, mingling a rather elevated and literary style with colloquialisms and interjections that belong to oral story-telling, but the tales themselves are well-chosen, unusual, dramatic and varied, including a number of Slavic tales and a delightful Scots one in which the stumpy black raven begs for a twist of tobacco from the hero.

Elephants are successfully collected between two covers by Katie Wales in A Book of Elephants. Inevitably some come off better than others: Richard Hughes' elephant with his friend the kangaroo have an uproariously nonsensical picnic, and Kipling's Elephant's Child never palls. Dumbo, Babar and various of their kin are present in verse or prose, all illustrated with something of de Brunhoff's style and vivacity by David McKee. As is only to be expected, they are hugely amusing.

THE FLYING HORSES: Tales from China, by Jo Manton and Robert Gittings. Methuen. $10.95.
A BOOK OF MAGICAL BIRDS, by Margaret Mayo. Methuen. $6.95.
A BOOK OF ELEPHANTS, by Katie Wales and David McKee. Methuen. $5.50.

A Model for Anarchists

By WALTER YOUNG

At a superficial level, it is easy to understand why George Woodcock is an anarchist. The envy of scholars and writers on both sides of the Atlantic, his literary output is a monument to self-discipline and inner freedom.

Forty books, countless articles in journals ranging from the Canadian Forum to the monthly published by the Automobile Association, several anthologies and, until recently, the editorship of Canadian Literature, the flagship of literary journals in Canada. If we all had half the capacity of Woodcock to direct ourselves in the paths of positive productivity there would be no need for government.

The anarchists collected by Woodcock in this anthology present in their particular ways the argument for a society wherein the individual exists freed from the yoke of government. As Woodcock points out in his introduction: It is the anarchist who takes the view that most of our social troubles stem from government. Government, with a power structure that is hierarchical, denies the development of the network of voluntary relationships that would form the fabric of anarchist society. The anarchist does not, in other words, assert a philosophy in which individualism is triumphant. He advances the view that the ideal society is one in which individual behavior is regulated by self-discipline and voluntary co-operation.

The popular view of anarchism is of a revolutionary creed that incubates chaos. Editorial writers confirm this view when they describe events surrounding a police strike as "anarchy in the streets." Lawlessness is not anarchy, although some anarchists — a tiny majority — have advocated such behavior as a technique for bringing down the oppressive structure of state authority. The popular connotation of the term does violence to the gentle humanity of such leading anarchists as Tolstoy, Thoreau, Kropotkin, Herbert Read and Paul Goodman.

Woodcock's anthology brings together passages from the writing of most of the anarchist thinkers from Pierre Joseph Proudhon, the founding father, to contemporaries like Goodman, Alex Comfort and George Woodcock — whose introductory essay is the longest selection in the book, and perhaps one of the best historical surveys of the ideology presently available.

In the current thrash to discover some third option for our creaking confederation, the anarchists have some instructive ideas about the advantages of decentralization. Colin Ward's essay, Topless Federations, is a timely reminder of the effectiveness of international agencies that function without central direction, although the present state of the postal service weakens one such example a little. Woodcock's own essay, Reflections on Decentralism, suggests that given the opportunity people prefer small units that give them some opportunity to share in the decisions that shape their destiny. What is described as Quebec's separatism, Scottish nationalism, or Western alienation can also be seen as an expression of a determination to escape the insensitivity of central control.

Of course, the anarchist would pursue the argument further for, ultimately, all government is corrosive: "Whoever puts his hand on me to govern me is an usurper and a tyrant; I declare him my enemy," said Proudhon. Like all anarchists, he had an unquenchable faith in the capacity of mankind to learn cooperation and self-discipline. And, from time to time, society has felt the impact of Proudhon's successors when the ideas of men like Paul Goodman, for example, have had a sudden impact on the education establishment. Free and open classrooms appeared everywhere, but they were followed by the stern advocates of "value education" and discipline. Although there always remains some residue among the products of each era of reform: a mistrust of authority, an awareness of the potential of cooperation and free association.

It is difficult, given popular prejudice, to suggest that anarchism is really a sort of human potential movement. But that is really what it is. After all, consider the output of George Woodcock.

Gustafson: The Quiet Poet

By CHARLES LILLARD

It is generally assumed that if one writes poetry, one reads a certain amount of poetry. The conclusion to this piece of logic is that the poet should then enjoy reviewing poetry. Not so; few poets I know read poetry, even fewer review it.

I won't pretend to know the whys and wherefores behind their reasoning. I only know my own; after teaching creative writing for several years I'm sick of poetry. And there is an even better reason: There isn't that much good poetry around. Why read a bad poet, even if he is Canadian, when one can turn to the bookshelves and pull out Yeats or Rilke, Cavafy or St. John Perse?

Against Grain

But today all my distaste for poetry seems negligible, for Ralph Gustafson's newest book is on my desk. Corners in the Glass is Gustafson's 12th book of poetry. For me this book confirms my opinion that he is one of the finest poets writing in Canada today. If he was not such a quiet man, personally as well as in his work, he would long ago have become our one major poet. But he is quiet; his work is the type which one reads late at night, aloud to oneself or to close friends. This goes against the grain today. The majority of our poets make their reputation as personalities, not as writers.

A blurb on the cover maintains that this collection is a "fervent affirmation of life," perhaps, but it is also an affirmation of death. Death, like life, is only a stage of living. In one poem after another the author underlines his belief that we are all part of history. Nothing ever dies — unless the poet fails in his work. Gustafson believes that the poet is the transformer: History and time, life and death, are his. Thanks to Gustafson, they are ours too.

The majority of poems in this book must be called meditations. Starting out with "Wednesday at North Hatley" (where the author has lived for many years), the book is a travelogue, a story of a man's discoveries in his own world. The climax is the last poem, the lovely "Under the Drums and Tramplings": "Under the drums and tramplings, quiet bones,/Femurs, ribs and metatarsals mixed,/Unreconstructable to what they were while Caesar/Wins the gambled plot and pot, Rome/For the taking. Ironic bait. Pastures green/For lying in beyond the pale of footprint . . ."

The book is well orchestrated, so well in fact that it is all but impossible to pull examples from the pages — always the first sign that the author is in control, not his audience. They must be read together; each is an integral part of a larger act. Life. A man's life where all things are important and necessary, whether it be a trip to Greece, listening to Chopin or Wagner or cutting petunias "like crazy to save them from/The frost." It's all "An Instant of Grosbeaks" where Gustafson writes, "Summer at the edge of the Barbados./. . . A shadow at the window, the flight/Gone. A movement of the mind/Sufficient."

Read Aloud

I won't say that this book is easy to read. It isn't. Many of the poems will force you to turn to your dictionary or the closest encyclopedia. And if you try to read the book without reading the poems aloud, you'll miss their life. Gustafson knows the sound and the importance of savoring words. The texture of words creates life. This "life" gives our own lives a deeper intensity and more meaning. Afterwards you may turn to the lines of Wallace Stevens which open the book: "It was pleasant to be sitting there,/While the sultriest fulgurations, flickering,/Cast corners in the glass."

In the Grand Manner

By JOHN LEONARD

Robert J. Seidman, who is 36 years old and who seems to have spent much of his life in one college town, or another, U.S. and abroad, has written a 19th-century novel. He has even set it in the middle of the 19th century. It is part historical romance — we are introduced to Horace Greeley and Stephen Douglas — and part Bildungs — roman, as if Goethe had composed one of his "educational novels" about an American Indian. It teems with characters, none of them safe from Seidman, who, in the grand manner, intervenes whenever he chooses to set things straight or to supply some inside information. And for most of the way, it is very good indeed.

One Smart Indian is the story of Tumbling Hawk, a young Cheyenne on the verge of bravehood in the Great Plains in the decade before the Civil War. As Tumbling Hawk waits for a vision of his destiny, we meet almost everybody in his camp and are told quite a lot about Cheyenne puberty rites, horsemanship, bow-making, buffalo-hunting, speechifying, shamanism and creation myths. Seidman's purpose here is not merely to pile on information; it is to acquaint us with the binoculars — the notions of time, space and civility — through which Tumbling Hawk will look at the white world.

His vision, when it comes, is schizoid: half mighty warrior with a rifle, half chaotic shadow. (One of the nice, 19th-century aspects of Seidman is that he doesn't shy away from difficult narrative moments. The preparation for the vision and the experience of it are relentlessly, persuasively observed. He will be just as forthright later on in dealing with sex and railroads.) His shaman advises Tumbling Hawk that he will be making a journey to the East.

This will turn out to mean a New England prep school, Yale and the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington — because soon after his vision he is injured and captured in a raid on white soldiers. (Significantly, he betrays himself by his fascination with a round, noisy, inexplicable object that turns out to be a pocket watch. Time, shape and mechanical repetition are subtexts in this novel.) He is nursed back to health in Laramie by Elzabeth Herter, who for some reason won't marry Col. Benjamin Hyde, who for his own reasons educated Tumbling Hawk and gives him a new name, Tom Hyde.

These pages on Tom's education are stunning. Culture shock becomes art; the organization of knowledge is itself a weapon and a prison. We are made to feel the edges of language, the mystery of glass, the violence of music, the terrors of perspective. Print leeches, and the idea of an expansive, imperial future is a form of greed. Benjamin Hyde, abolitionist, humanitarian, dreams of Tom as a leader. Tom, identifying with Moses in the Bible as he will later identify with Sparacus in a play in New York, goes along with that dream. It will end with his stealing a portion of the white man's power — and a lathe and a drill press to manufacture Henry repeater rifles — to hold the plains for his people. Repeater rifles, against numbers and waste, are unavailing.

"When they can't waste," thinks Tom turned back into Tumbling Hawk, 'they'll die." But he and his nation go first.

Only once does Seidman go too fast, and that is a grievous error. In the process of turning Tom back into Tumbling Hawk, he ripsnorts. There isn't enough agonizing, sufficient preparation. The pacing is wrong. A bureaucrat doesn't become Spartacus immediately after swallowing the pill of a disappointing love affair. Long broods are obligatory.

Otherwise, One Smart Indian is an astonishing act of empathy imagination on a rampage. It is enthusiastic. Numbers, measurements, footfalls, particularities, gnashings — all have emotional weight and grain, a drumbeat, a quality of caring. Fathers and sons do their best. Animism, ritual, exercise, courtship and honor have their magical uses. Rhythm, having lost to linear progression, is mourned. Someone has taken the trouble to write a novel that is interesting without being cheap.

ONE SMART INDIAN, by Robert J. Seidman. Longman. $11.75.

More Virginia Woolf trivia, But it's still hard to put down

Last week, I used up all my space in deploring the attempted deification of Virginia Woolf by cultists who by their idolatry have largely succeeded in obscuring the novelist. Today I must deal with the book that re-triggered my lament: The Diary of Virginia Woolf — Volume 1, 1915-1919, edited by Anne Olivier Bell.

The editor's husband, Professor Quentin Bell, nephew and biographer of Virginia Woolf who is notorious for his stubborn refusal to commit himself to any kind of critical opinion, has shed every vestige of caution in his Introduction. He says the diaries are a masterpiece, a literary achievement equal to his famous aunt's best novels.

The professor (of fine arts, one should note) refuses to justify his assertion, and forestalls critics by claiming, correctly, that no one can properly assess the work until all five volumes have been published. This, of course, places the reviewer of the first volume in an invidious position.

Sense of Deja Vu

The situation is further complicated by the fact that those who, like this reviewer, have read Bell's biography, which was largely based on all his aunt's diaries, have a sense of deja vu as if, Merlyn-like, one were living backwards. It's confusing, maybe deliberately so, because confusion enhances a god's stature, so let me attempt to simplify things by bringing the diaries — and Virgina Woolf — down to earth.

There are three types of diarists. The truly great ones such as Samuel Pepys, John Evelyn, Saint-Simon, James Boswell, Fanny Burney, and, in our own time, Harold Nicolson, and, to a lesser degree, Charles Ritchie, concentrated on recording the events of their times. Their impressions of events are regarded as important because all were unusually well-informed, and not excessively ambitious, critical or jealous.

At the other extreme are people who dramatize and fictionalize their own activities, obsessional diary-keepers who end up experiencing nothing directly but only in terms of how they will record it when they get home.

The third type of diarist, one who cannot easily be categorized, is the strong individualist who veers from one extreme to the other, intelligent enough to comment profoundly on the times but too eaten up with self to be objective. The first volume of Virginia Woolf's diaries indicates that she was this third type of diarist.

Unlike her serious literary manuscripts, which she fussed over constantly, Virginia Woolf dashed off her diary entries and never made a correction or an amendment. This makes for freshness but, unfortunately, one never knows what to believe because even her greatest admirers, including Quentin Bell, admit that not only did she allow her imagination to run away with her but that she was malicious, a gossip, and a liar. ("Virginia Woolf's reputation for truthfulness was not good" is how Bell puts it.)

Mental Breakdown

This will be cause for concern in later volumes but in this first volume it hardly matters because the diary is so full of trivia that the general reader will be too irritated to worry about inexactitudes. Initially, one must not be too censorious for Virginia Woolf was not an ordinary woman in any sense and in addition madness or the threat of it was an ever-present reality.

She started her diary on January 1, 1915, but it was interrupted only six weeks later by a mental breakdown which led to her fourth bout of temporary insanity. For months she suffered violent and raving madness. Although she had returned to comparative normality by the end of 1915 it was October, 1917, before she resumed writing a diary with regularity.

We are now at page 55 and for the next hundred or so pages it is mostly trivia — visits to the library, walks with the dog, and who came to tea. The fact that those who came to tea included Maynard Keynes, Lytton Strachey, Katharine Mansfield and others of their kind is not particularly interesting because the reports are domestic rather than cerebral.

A War Ignored

It is not until the Spring of 1918, which is reached halfway through the book, that the entries become more comprehensive and occasionally — but only occasionally — more profound.

Maybe my disappointment with the work was due to unfulfilled expectations, but I think that will be the general reaction. After all, this was the period that included the First World War, but you'd hardly know it. She records how inconvenienced she was by the servant shortage and the difficulty of obtaining chocolate and the occasional Zeppelin raid, but apart from these things the war might have been taking place on another planet.

One knows that Virginia Woolf, in common with most members of the Bloomsbury group, conscientiously objected to the war, but the studied avoidance of reference to it in one's diary seems inhuman. Perhaps because of this I was unduly irritated by constant references to servant problems, house-hunting, shopping sprees and all the malicious gossip about friends.

When this portion of the diary was compiled Virginia Woolf was in her mid-thirties, was happily married, was reviewing books regularly for The Times Literary Supplement, had two major novels (The Voyage Out and Night and Day) published and generally acclaimed, and was acknowledged as a novelist of the front rank. In that enviable position she could have afforded to have displayed some interest in the world at large. Evidently, judging by forthright diary entries, intellectual snobbery, a refusal to suffer fools (i.e. non-intellectuals), and sheer self-centredness precluded this.

Again and again I was on the point of putting the book down for good, out of sheer exasperation, but I couldn't do it. Something compelled me to read on until I had finished the whole thing, footnotes, reverent editorial comments and all. I didn't enjoy the book; the rare stimulating observation was not enough to offset the recording of ordinary facts about those who, despite their attainments, were essentially dreary people.

I read on, as most people will, because the diaries are those of Virginia Woolf and however much one deplores the deification of her there is no doubt she possessed a magic which continues to cast its spell. I am certainly not panting to read the remaining volumes of her diaries, but I know that when the next one appears I will cast everything else aside until I have devoured it.

Steals Their Thunder

I cannot explain my ambivalence; those acquainted with her peculiar genius will no doubt understand. They will also understand how my original intention to link books concerning Katharine Mansfield and Elizabeth Bowen with this one was defeated by an inexplicable feeling that Virginia Woolf had the right to hog this space two weeks in a row.

Next week, I promise to write about Mansfield and Bowen — but I can't guarantee that Virginia Woolf won't pop up to steal their thunder, as she did during her lifetime and even after her death by suicide in 1941.

Communitas Revisited: Some Changes Needed

By JULIAN REID

Back in 1947, the late Paul Goodman and his architect brother Percival published Communitas, one of the most fascinating exercises in utopian sociology I have ever encountered. When I discovered their book (in its revised second edition, published in 1960), I was utterly entranced. It fired both my imagination and my youthful idealism — for here was a stimulating new way of approaching the future and the infinite promise it held out for us all.

Communitas was built around the appealing thesis that we were almost unqualifiedly free to choose the kind of society our children and grand-children would grow up in. Collectively, Western man was at last in the position to specify the worldly goals of his choice and then — to all intents and purposes starting anew from scratch — to construct an ideal society which perfectly embodied them.

To demonstrate their point, the Goodmans offered three vividly imagined alternative "paradigms" for the brave new world of tomorrow. The first (with broad elements of tongue-in-cheek satire) presented the future dream-metropolis as a kind of outsized department-store where every day was Christmas — and every inhabitant whole-heartedly devoted to the joys of conspicuous consumption.

The second, somewhat less cynical, envisioned a very different community, one idealistically aiming at "the elimination of the difference between production and consumption." And finally there was a blueprint for a rather paranoid right-wing utopia, meticulously designed to reconcile the demand for "planned security" with an absolute minimum of formal government regulation.

Viewed today in retrospect, Communitas appears very dated indeed. As the surviving Goodman brother, Percial, points out in his sequel-of-sorts, The Double E, all three of its paradigms were based on the tacit assumption that modern technology made feasible a future of limitless economic growth, in which it would always be possible for all and sundry both to waste and to want not to their hearts' content.

"For the first time in history," the Goodmans proclaimed in the characteristic accents of naive technocratic optimism, we are privileged to possess "a surplus technology, a technology of free choice that allows for the most widely various community arrangements and ways of life."

"The presumption was correct," Percival now comments, "but who could have guessed how quickly our appetites would grow, how quickly our surplus would diminish, and how badly we would choose? Only thirty-five years later. what had seemed an ever-brimming cornucopia threatens to run dry. Limits, of free choice, scarcity, not surplus, are now the facts that will condition our future."

* * *

And so he presents a new fourth paradigm to supplement its three now-less-than-viable predecessors — a community devoted to the "Double E" of his book's title, wedding Ecology and Economics in an unassuming utopia dedicated to the maximal realization of human potential with a minimal expenditure of irreplaceable resources. His central point is that we can indeed create a better and more humane world for all while living strictly within our collective means — but only if we are willing to make the necessary changes in our outdatedly expansive attitudes, and in our guiding visions of the world as we would like it to be.

Sensible and generally practicable as most The Double E's proposals are, they somehow lack the imaginative flair of Communitas — presumably those remarkable flashes of offbeat visionary realism that enlivened the earlier book were the contributions of Paul, not Percival. Still, the guiding spirit remains unchanged, and the new suggestions are none the less worthy of consideration for the relative flatness of their presentation.

In any case, the real substance of Percival Goodman's book — accounting for a good three-quarters of its total length — is not the specific paradigm around which it is centred, but the systematic approach by which the interlocking elements of that paradigm are evolved and justified. Essentially, The Double E is less an exercise in free-soaring utopian speculation than a sane and eminently sensible essay on the vital factors we must take into account if we are to build for ourselves a viable "post-industrial society."

Most of what Goodman has to say in this connection is not new — which is itself reassuring, for it indicates how far we have already progressed towards the still-utopian goal of transmuting the uncommon sense of yesteryear into the conventional wisdom of tomorrow. In any case, what really matters is that he says it clearly and well, setting it into a refreshingly practical context.

Slipped unpretentiously into the bookstores as an Anchor Books paperback original, The Double E may not draw the attention it deserves. If so, it will be a pity. For like the unassuming future it advocates, Percival Goodman's modest little book is an admirable exemplification of its own guiding principle — that a little, properly handled, can turn out to be tremendously more rewarding than a lot.
